Elk Depredation Actions in the Magic Valley Region Continue to Show Positive Outcomes

— Fish and Game —

Over the last several years biologists with Fish and Game have been applying consistent deterrents to local big game herds in an effort to keep them from damaging crops on private property. In some locations across the Magic Valley Region these deterrents, which include non-lethal and lethal actions, are resulting in reduced levels of crop damage. Department staff are continuing night patrols of known depredation hot spots across the region to insure a consistent effort to keep big game animals off agricultural crops.

Providing hunting opportunity through depredation hunts

Since late July the Department has established five depredation hunts for elk and one depredation hunt for deer using hunters to help change big game behavior while reducing the number of depredating animals. These hunts have occurred across the Magic Valley.

The landowner and Fish and Game equally allocate tags for depredation hunts, which are typically very small numbers. If a depredation hunt occurs in a Game Management Unit where a controlled hunt is scheduled, Fish and Game will randomly select hunters who hold a controlled hunt tag within that unit.

Fish and Game has issued 11 kill permits to landowners, allowing them to take elk that are causing damage to their crops. One kill permit has been issued for deer. To date, landowners have harvested six antlerless elk and no deer.

Two managed elk hunts have occurred in the region which provided opportunity for six hunters to assist with depredation mitigation efforts on two properties in the north half of the region. As with depredation hunts, the tags are split equally between the landowner and Fish and Game, with the Department randomly selecting hunters with an existing antlerless controlled hunt tag in that Game Management Unit.

Since late July, Department sharpshooters have removed 41 elk on properties in the Little Camas and Camas Prairie region, of which 37 were antlerless and four were spike bulls.

All elk were processed in the field and immediately placed in a refrigerated truck where the quarters were frozen within hours of harvest. The meat has been delivered to a local meat processor. All meat will be donated to Idaho Hunters Feeding the Hungry who will distribute the meat to area food pantries across the Magic Valley.

Trapping and translocating elk

Fish and Game will begin a trapping and translocation project in mid-October in an effort to reduce the size of the chronic depredating elk herd in the Little Camas region. Trapping is expected to occur during two time periods: early fall of 2020 and early spring 2021. Trapping elk at these times will help ensure that these elk are those that have learned to depredate on local crops. The goal is to translocate up to one-third, or approximately 100 antlerless animals total between the fall and spring capture efforts, from the depredating herd.

Trapping and translocating elk is both dangerous and stressful on elk and the Fish and Game staff who will be conducting the operation. While every effort is made to minimize stress to the captured elk, there will undoubtedly be individual elk that will die due to capture related activities. Any elk that die during the translocation effort will immediately be processed and all meat will be professionally processed and donated to Idaho Hunters Feeding the Hungry.

Elk will be trapped using a corral trap with very long "wings" which will funnel elk into the trap. The elk will be driven into the trap via a helicopter.

It is anticipated that trapping will occur over several days due to capacity of the trap as well as limitations of paneled livestock trailers to move elk. Once trapped, all elk will be tested for brucellosis following U.S. Department of Agriculture and Idaho State Department of Agriculture protocols prior to release in central Idaho. Elk that test positive for brucellosis will be euthanized.

For more information, contact the Magic Valley Regional Office at 208-324-4359.

WITH THE SCHOOL YEAR looking a bit different this year for some families, I'd encourage parents to include some hands-on, outdoor experiences like gardening in their homeschool efforts! We've got lots of plants left still and fall is a great time for planting. Get your kids' hand dirty and improve their memory and attention at the same time. Have kids help you plant perennials, rake leaves and help with watering and weeding. The garden has taught me so many things, I'm sure it will teach your kids a thing or two as well. ## Upcoming National Museum To Honor All Soldiers

— NAPS —

If you or someone you know is a soldier, Army veteran, Army family member or other proud military supporter, you can become a permanent part of history at the National Museum of the United States Army. An historic project led by the Army Historical Foundation and the U.S. Army, the Museum is going up at Fort Belvoir, Va., just south of Washington, D.C.

"We are proud to build a national museum that will tell the history of the Army—and our nation—through the eyes of American soldiers," said Foundation President U.S. Army Retired Lt. Gen. Roger Schultz. "The timeline for opening the Museum was delayed because of the COVID-19 pandemic, but we promise it will be worth the wait."

To be included in the Museum's story, soldiers and Army veterans can submit their stories of service in the Registry of the American Soldier, which will be one of the largest collections of American Soldier profiles ever assembled. Stories can also be submitted on a veteran's behalf, at no cost. The Foundation currently features the Registry on its website and the collection will be made available on kiosks in the Museum. Stories can be submitted at www.armyhistory.org/the-registries/.

Members of the Army community can also be a permanent part of the Museum by ordering a customized commemorative brick to be laid on the grounds of the Museum. More than 8000 bricks have already been installed, honoring soldiers from all 50 states. Among the bricks are those for such well-known Army veterans as Senator Bob Dole and General Eric Shinseki. Individuals and organizations can order bricks at www.armyhistory.org/bricks. To stay up to date on the project, including announcements about opening day, visit www.armyhistory.org.

The bidding:

Pass 1♦ Pass 2 NT
Pass 3♠ Pass 3 NT
Opening lead — three of hearts.

Notrump contracts often feature a race between the defenders and the declarer for the establishment of tricks. That is why the opening leader usually leads his longest suit at the start of play. The defenders have a built-in advantage because they get the jump on declarer in the race to develop tricks. If they have enough high cards and a sufficiently long suit, the tempo they gain on the opening lead frequently proves to be decisive. But declarer can sometimes offset this advantage by choosing correctly which of his own long suits to play first. Here is such a case. West led a heart, and South won East's king with the ace. Declarer then played a diamond to dummy's jack, taken by East with the ace. Back came a heart to South's ten and West's jack, and another low heart by West established his suit. When the opposing diamonds turned out to be divided 4-1, declarer could score only eight tricks, and he eventually finished down one. However, South should have made the contract. He should not have attacked diamonds first. Instead, he should have crossed to dummy with a club at trick two and returned a low spade. If East has the ace and takes it, South has nine tricks -- three spades, two hearts and four clubs. And if East doesn't go up with the ace, South wins the spade with the queen, then shifts his attention to diamonds. After forcing out the ace, he again has nine tricks -- one spade, two hearts, four clubs and two diamonds. If West has the ace of spades, as in the actual case, he is stymied after he wins the spade queen with the ace. A heart return into the Q-10 hands South an extra trick, while any other return allows declarer to attack diamonds, assuring at least 10 tricks.

More Upland Bird Seasons Open in Mid-September

— Fish and Game —

Many Idaho upland game bird hunting seasons are about to begin, adding to the list of hunting options that already opened at the beginning of September. Here's a brief summary of the upcoming seasons.

Chukar & Partridge

Chukar and gray partridge seasons run from September 19th through January 31st. The daily bag limit is eight chukar and eight gray partridge, and the possession limit is 24 chukar and 24 gray partridge.

California Quail

Bobwhite and California quail seasons also run from September 19th through January 31st. The daily bag limit is 10 total, and the possession limit is 30 total. Area 2 in eastern Idaho is closed. Hunters are reminded that there are no seasons for Gambel's or Mountain Quail.

Hunters need only a valid hunting license to hunt quail, chukar, gray partridge and forest grouse.

Sage Grouse

In open areas south of the Snake River (Zone 2), the seven-day season will run Sept. 19th-25th, with the traditional one bird per day and two birds in possession bag limit.

In open areas north of the Snake River (Zone 3), the two-day season will run Sept. 19th-20th, with a one bird per day and two birds in possession bag limit.

More information

For more details, hunters should consult the 2020 & 2021 Upland Game, Furbearer and Turkey Seasons and Rules brochure, available at all Fish and Game license vendors or online idfg.idaho.gov/hunt/rules/upland-furbearer-turkey.

10 Ways to Inspire Yourself When You Feel Like Quitting

— Article City —

One of the cruelest facts you'll ever come across in life is the fact that 98% of people don't achieve their dreams. There is nothing great about this club. The most important thing you need to realize is that quitting is not the answer, but finding ways to inspire yourself is.

So many people have failed so many times before becoming the most successful people in the world. Success wouldn't have happened to them if they quit along the way, and they would be a part of the club. We totally get why you would want to quit because sometimes the going gets quite tough, and we feel like we just want to give up.

We have gathered some of the best ways to inspire yourself when you want to quit. The following tips will help you spark and fire your motivation, inspiration, and drive back on, so you can achieve the dreams you have been longing to achieve. Here are some of the best motivation tips.

1. Embrace the Struggle

We understand how cliché this may sound but hear us out. Most of the things in life that are worth having rarely come easy. Most people have to go through struggle, pain, sacrifices, and sleepless nights to achieve great things in life, but in the end, it's usually well worth it.

Stop looking at this like the negative that you perceive it to be, and separate yourself from the rest by enduring. Failures are a part of life, and so is the feeling to quit, but if you want something as badly as you want to achieve your goal, you'll take a breather, get your firecracker back on and continue to grind.

2. Keep Reminding Yourself Why

If you're struggling with your motivation right now, there is no better way to get it going again than reminding yourself why you're doing it in the first place. The desire to quit may be overwhelming right now, and you may be wondering whether it's all worth it. Maybe your journey is taking longer than you anticipated, and things don't seem to be going according to plan, that you've lost faith in yourself and lost sight of what you were after.

Be as it may, think about your why. Why do you want this, and what made you start in the first place? Do you need to re-evaluate your goals and change things up for you to find your motivation again?

3. Consider the People You Can't Let Down

Regardless of what you're trying to achieve, you have people that support you, believe in you, and depend on you. One of the best ways to be inspired is to think about the people you don't want to disappoint.

How many people look up to you and want you to love your best life? Think about them and how it'll affect them if you quit and just give up before meeting your goals.

4. Recognize How Far You've Come

When you feel stuck and need to inspire yourself, look back at all the progress you have made so far. On the way here, you have learned, grown, and changed a few things or discovered strengths you didn't know you had. Acknowledge these things, recognize the growth you have achieved so far and let it be the motivation you desperately need.

If, for instance, you're halfway through a startup that doesn't seem to grow, think about everything you had to do to get here. Will all that effort, struggle, and time go down the drain? If you're already halfway there, the hardest part is over, and you only need to ensure a little longer before you finally get where you need to be.

5. Forget Being Perfection

It's admirable that you're striving for perfection, but you need to understand that this is unattainable. If you're always after perfection, the disappointments may follow you more often than you'd like. Don't set your plans in stone and feel that they have to go according to plan.

When you hit a rock, change direction and find alternative ways to make things work. Sometimes things happen completely unexpectedly and end up going even better than the initial plans we had. If you need to, take a few steps back, change your perspective, and see how you can achieve your goals differently.

6. What Happens After You Quit

One of the most significant reasons why you need to find ways to inspire yourself, it's the thought of what will happen after you quit. It's easy to talk yourself out of doing something most of the time, but have you thought about the consequences of quitting? How will it affect your professional and personal life?

What will it do to your self-esteem and the feeling of being a failure? What will happen if you stop working out, or abandon that small business, or your college education? Where will you start from there?

7. Find Someone to Hold You Accountable

Accountability is the one thing that can keep you motivated, especially if it's someone that you don't want to disappoint. Being accountable for all your actions will keep you aligned with your goals, and it's one of the best ways to be inspired. Checking in with someone or knowing that someone expects results from you is a great way to keep pushing yourself.

8. Use External Rewards

If you want to know how to motivate yourself, try giving yourself external rewards to the small steps you take. Every time you find that your motivation is dwindling, take small steps towards a reward you really want, which will make you look forward to finishing. Give yourself special treats or watch a few episodes of your favorite series when you're done.

If you have a large project, then you can make it a habit to buy yourself something nice every time you achieve a task. Inspire yourself by getting yourself things you love or going online and reading great motivations books, picture quotes, and success stories. Seeing that things haven't been easy for others will give you the drive to continue until you finally succeed as well.

9. Take Break and Find Ways to Relax

Life can feel like a never-ending rat race, and sometimes all you need to do is take a break and refocus your entire perspective. The motivation you need may come from looking at your project with fresh eyes and a different perspective. Take a break, find a few ways to relax, from getting a massage, going for a long drive, activity or hobby you love, or meditate.

10. Be Proud of Yourself

Even if you're taking baby steps and the task ahead seems like a mountain you'll never conquer, look back and be proud of how far you've come. This will inspire you to take more steps, regardless of how small. Pat yourself on the back for the small victories and understand that you can only achieve your goals if you keep going, not if you quit.

OUR LOCAL VETERANS

Every Veterans Day we print a special section highlighting local veterans. If you, a friend or family member has served in any branch of the military, help us honor them by including them in our 2020 Salute to Veterans.

NOVEMBER 5TH, 2020

Just send us a picture with a name, rank, years served and branch of service, and we'll publish them in a special section in our November 5th, 2020 issue.

If you are mailing a photo and would like it returned, please include a self-addressed stamped envelope, and we'd appreciate it if you include your phone number in case we need to verify anything (the spelling of a name, for example). Please be as complete as possible, and have everything to us by October 30th so we can be sure to get everyone in!

Fishery Gems of The Gem State: Mountain Lakes

— Fish and Game —

When summer crowds descend on our more popular river fisheries, solitude during your fishing excursions can be increasingly hard to find. Fortunately, for those willing to put in a little effort, there are still plenty of destinations available in Idaho that not only often offer solitude, but exceptional fishing, gorgeous scenery, and diverse target species which may not be found at lower elevations. These are our mountain lakes. With over 1000 mountain lakes in Idaho that hold fish, you can spend a lifetime exploring the backcountry of Idaho visiting new mountain lakes. Late summer and early fall are some of the best times to fish mountain lakes as fish are actively feeding and putting on reserves for the upcoming winter. With so many options of lakes and drainages to choose from, it can be difficult figuring out where to plan your mountain lake trip. Luckily, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's Fishing Planner located on our website can help here. The Fishing Planner helps you identify which species are present in the lake based on available surveys, what the stocking history has been, and what the regulations are. Part of the Fishing Planner includes an interactive map which allows the user to easily check out what nearby streams and lakes have to offer. For more information on how to use the Fishing Planner to research mountain lakes, check out this IDFG YouTube video which also describes how IDFG monitors and manages these gems of the Gem State.

Locally, we have 43 mountain lakes in the Upper Snake Region that currently support fisheries including the highest elevation fish-bearing lakes in the state! I've been to all of them, and it is really hard trying to pin down a favorite. Species in our region's lakes include Yellowstone Cutthroat Trout, Rainbow Trout, Brook Trout, Tiger Trout, Artic Grayling, and Golden Trout. Of the 43 Upper Snake Region lakes, 34 are routinely stocked with fish to support the fisheries. The rest support themselves through natural reproduction. This year, IDFG staff performed surveys on five of our mountain lakes, including Bench Lake, Goat Lake, and Angel Lake in the Big Lost drainage, Divide Creek Lake in the Medicine Lodge drainage, and Packsaddle Lake in the Teton drainage. These surveys provide valuable insight into how many fish are in the lake, how fast they are growing, how difficult they are to catch, whether fish are naturally reproducing, how much angler use may be occurring, and other information that is useful for making management decisions on these small, but amazing waters.

If you would like to learn more about mountain lakes in the Upper Snake Region, feel free to stop by the office or give us a call. These lake offer something for everyone, not only in terms of fish species and scenery, but also in terms of access. Some lakes are accessible via motorized vehicle, some are accessible by a non-motorized trail, and some lakes do not have trail or road access to them. If you're looking for solitude, great fishing, great scenery, and some unique species to fish for, Idaho offers you plenty of options at our mountain lakes!

Take Steps Toward a Healthier Lifestyle

— Family Features —

There isn't a better time than now to start getting fit with health information and products so easily accessible. Simply incorporate the basics into your daily routine - good nutrition, adequate exercise and a daily supplement - and start down the path toward better health.

Plan a Nutritious Diet

- The Dietary Guidelines for Americans describes a healthy diet as one that emphasizes fruits, vegetables, lean meats, poultry, fish, beans, eggs, nuts, whole grains and fat-free or low-fat milk products. It should be low in saturated fat, trans fat, cholesterol, salt and added sugar.

- Warm weather makes fresh produce more easily accessible. Eat more fruits and vegetables by setting freshly washed and prepared produce on the kitchen counter or at eye level in the fridge. At every meal, make sure half your plate is made up of fruit and vegetable servings.

- One-fourth of your plate at every meal should be made up of grains, such as wheat, rice, oats, cornmeal or barley. People who eat whole grains as part of a healthy diet have a reduced risk of some chronic diseases.

- The remaining one-fourth of your plate should be lean or low-fat cuts of meat, plant-based protein or seafood.

Get Regular Exercise

The Department of Health and Human Services recommends an adequate amount of exercise every day. This guide can point to the right amount of exercise to schedule:

- Get at least 150 minutes of moderate aerobic activity every week. For best results, spread the time out over several days.

- Do strength training exercises at least twice a week. Lifting weights builds muscle, which means the body burns more calories - even at rest.

- Keep in mind that when people are active, they produce more free radicals. The antioxidants found in supplements can help buffer the negative effects of the workout.

Improving your diet, exercising regularly, taking a daily supplement and getting enough restorative sleep are all important steps to overall wellness. Work to incorporate each step into your daily routine until you reach your goal.

 ASK FOR KEN

Depending on where you live, restrictions on social gatherings may become less strict in the coming weeks and months. However, many experts caution that care should still be exercised when groups of people gather.

After an extended period without social contact, it's only natural to crave some interaction, and there's evidence that doing so can be advantageous for your mental health. However, taking precautions to protect your physical health, along with your guests', can make for a more enjoyable event.

Keep it contained. Limit your gatherings to a few close friends or family members so if someone does get sick, contact tracing is a simple task. Keep in mind the number of same-household families you invite is more important than the number of people in that family. For example, one family of six that has already been living in close quarters poses a lower risk than three couples living in separate houses. Also be mindful of your guests' approach to prevention; if they've been less cautious than your family or vice versa, there's room for conflict and anxiety.

Celebrate outdoors. Indoor event spaces naturally have less circulation, meaning potential airborne particles hang around longer. Planning your gathering outdoors helps ensure more free-moving fresh air and more space for guests to spread out and practice social distancing.

Encourage guests to bring their own. It may go against all your good hosting inclinations but hosting a bring-your-own party eliminates shared food and the risk of cross-contamination. You can provide disposable table service (plates, silverware and napkins) and single-serve beverages, but skip the cooler everyone reaches into.

Provide ample, well-spaced seating. Encourage guests to keep some distance from one another by creating comfy seating arrangements. You can take it a step farther by asking guests to bring their own chairs and directing each family to set up its space a reasonable distance from the next.

Make cleanliness a priority. Create stations with hand sanitizer or wipes. You can also create a makeshift sink to minimize trips to the restroom indoors. Provide a spray bottle or bucket, soap and paper towels near the hose for clean-ups.

National Cheeseburger Day

— National Day Calendar —

National Cheeseburger Day on September 18th honors America's favorite sandwich with a slice of cheese. A few days ago, we celebrated National Double Cheeseburger Day. This food holiday is the lighter version. While only a single stack, this tasty burger still earns a celebration!

There are many theories to the beginning of the cheeseburger dating back to the 1920s. One story suggests that Lionel Sternberger invented the cheeseburger in 1926 while working at his father's Pasadena, California sandwich shop, The Rite Spot. During an experiment, he dropped a slice of American cheese on a sizzling hamburger.

However, like numerous iconic foods, many people and restaurants claim the origin story. For example, a restaurant in Los Angeles called O'Dell's placed the cheeseburger on their menu in 1928. It came smothered with chili – all for the price of a quarter. Kaelin's Restaurant in Louisville, Kentucky claims they invented the cheeseburger in 1934. One record that gives the Humpty Dumpty Drive-In in Denver, CO bragging rights is the trademark they received in 1935 for the name "cheeseburger." Another who applied for a trademark of that word was Gus Belt, the founder of Steak n' Shake. Sometime in the 1930s he also applied for the trademark.

Despite all these claims, a couple of things are for sure. The cheeseburger checks all the marks for satisfying a craving, and the cheeseburger isn't going anywhere!

MUSEUM of NORTH IDAHO

Even though the North Idaho Fair has been cancelled this summer, maybe for the first time since its beginning in the 1930s, the Museum's photo for this week is the 1977 fair. The photo shows former Coeur d'Alene High School principal G.O. Phippeny ringing a school bell at the Museum of North Idaho's fair exhibit in 1977. The exhibit won 3rd place. Phippeny served as principal of Coeur d'Alene High School from 1934 to 1958. Phippeny Park, the former location of the Coeur d'Alene Junior and Senior High Schools was named in his honor in 1989.

For information call 208-664-3448 or email dd@museumni.org. Online at www.museumni.org or mail PO Box 812, Coeur d'Alene ID 83816-0812.

Fire Safety for Furry Family Members

— Family Features —

If you have a fire escape plan in place for your home, you're steps ahead of many Americans. According to the National Fire Protection Association, only 30% of American households have developed and practiced a home fire escape plan. It's important for families to stay ahead of the curve and be prepared in the event of a fire.

If an emergency occurs, every member of the household should be accounted for, including pets.

Every year, 500,000 pets suffer from smoke inhalation and 40,000 die due to home fires, according to the American Veterinary Medical Foundation. With 90% of pet owners stating they consider their animals members of the family, according to UBS, it is important to be prepared to rescue four-legged friends when disaster strikes.

"Pets are part of our families, so it's important to recognize they're vulnerable to the same fire risks as people," said Sharon Cooksey, Kidd's fire safety expert. "There are simple ways to keep pets safe at home. Most importantly, recognize every second counts in case of fire, so pet owners should install smoke and carbon monoxide alarms as well as fire extinguishers. Make sure alarms are replaced every 10 years and fire extinguishers every 12 years."

Protect your pet - and your human family - with these tips.

Minimize smoke alarm reactions. Dogs may become unsettled or anxious when a smoke alarm sounds, running and hiding rather than heading toward the door. Particularly if your pet shows signs of agitation when you test the alarm, enlist assistance from professional trainers to help your canine friend learn how to properly respond. Some websites offer online tips, too.

Use window cling alerts. In an emergency, first responders need to be able to quickly assess the number of pets in a home. Consider attaching a non-adhesive decal to a window near your front door to let rescuers know how many animals are inside.

Account for pets in evacuation plans. Pets should always be included in a family's evacuation plan. Always involve your pets and stay aware of their typical hiding spots or safe places where they often nap, in case you must evacuate quickly. Be sure to practice your evacuation plan periodically. Also assign a family member to be responsible for each pet's escape. Keep an emergency kit with food, medication, a leash and collars near the exit.

Keep alarms current. Smoke and carbon monoxide alarms must be replaced after 10 years. In addition to testing alarms once each week, check the manufacture date on your smoke and carbon monoxide alarms to make sure they're current. If they're older than 10 years of age, it's time to replace them. Some options, like Kidd's Wire-Free Interconnected Alarms, feature built-in 10-year sealed batteries and offer simple setup without the hassle of hardwiring or a Wi-Fi connection.

Plan ahead for emergency care. If the unthinkable happens, make sure your pets will be cared for. Save contact information for your veterinarian in a place where you and other family members can easily access it, such as your phone contacts list or a cloud-based shared file. Research local boarding options, hotels that allow pets and friends or family members who might take in your pet temporarily. Also be sure your pet's microchip information is current in case you become separated in an emergency.

HELP US TO RECOGNIZE & HONOR OUR LOCAL VETERANS

Every Veterans Day we print a special section highlighting local veterans. If you, a friend or family member has served in any branch of the military, help us honor them by including them in our 2020 Salute to Veterans.

NOVEMBER 5TH, 2020

HONORING ALL WHO SERVED

SALUTE TO VETERANS

get your NICKEL'S WORTH

Just send us a picture with a name, rank, years served and branch of service, and we'll publish them in a special section in our November 5th, 2020 issue. If you are mailing a photo and would like it returned, please include a self-addressed stamped envelope, and we'd appreciate it if you include your phone number in case we need to verify anything (the spelling of a name, for example). Please be as complete as possible, and have everything to us by October 30th so we can be sure to get everyone in!

WEED

ARE YOU SPREADING NOXIOUS WEEDS?

Throughout Idaho noxious weeds are spreading at an alarming rate. They are seriously threatening our pasturelands, forests, wetlands and croplands. Natural areas are at high risk for noxious weed invasion.

Weeds and weed seeds move easily from one location to another. Many have hooks and spines allowing them to cling to the tires and undercarriages of our vehicles, or to hitch hike on our socks and shoelaces and on our pets and pack animals. Some may even be transported in decorative floral arrangements. Don't give them a chance to spread!

WHAT YOU CAN DO!

Control weeds on your property.

Contact your local county weed office for plant identification and for the best method of elimination.

Be an informed gardener.

Do not plant invasive weeds in your yard. Do not spread seeds through compost, topsoil or mulch piles.

Become familiar with local noxious weeds AND inform others.

Keep vehicle out of weed patches.

Drive on established roads. Check your tires and undercarriages. Remove clinging weeds before leaving the area.

Walk on established trails.

Check your socks, shoes, and pants cuffs for plant material before and after hiking.

Identify the problem.

Properly managed land will prevent new infestations and eliminate recurring infestations.

Feed pack animals processed food pellets

before and during backcountry trips to avoid transporting seed in animal feces.

Check your watercraft and trailer

for clinging aquatic weeds.

Aquarium and aquatic garden plants

often survive and thrive in our natural areas. Properly dispose of aquatic plants.

Volunteer to control weeds

in your city, county and public lands.

Report weed sites to your county weed superintendent.

Slow Cooker Sweet Potato, Plantain and Lentil Caribbean Curry

— Family Features —

Prep time: 20 minutes

- 1 tablespoon, plus 2 teaspoons, grapeseed oil, divided
- 1 large DOLE(r) White Onion, chopped
- 4 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 teaspoons curry powder
- 1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon grated fresh ginger
- 1 can reduced sodium chickpeas, drained and rinsed
- 2 large Dole Sweet Potatoes, chopped (about 4 cups)
- 2 medium Dole Plantains, chopped (about 3 cups)
- 4 cups low-sodium vegetable broth
- 1/2 cup red lentils
- 3 cups packed, chopped collard greens
- 1/4 cup roasted salted pepitas

In large skillet over medium-high heat, heat 2 teaspoons oil; add onion and cook 3 minutes, or until softened, stirring occasionally. Add garlic, curry powder, cayenne pepper and ginger; cook 2 minutes, or until fragrant and starting to brown, stirring occasionally.

Transfer onion mixture to 3-4 quart slow cooker; add chickpeas, potatoes, plantains, broth and lentils. Cover and cook on high 4 hours or low 8 hours, or until potatoes and lentils are tender.

Stir in collard greens; cook 20 minutes, or until greens are tender. Serve garnished with pepitas.

Questions & Answers About Our Environment

Dear EarthTalk: Any tips for reducing the amount of disposable plastic I use for food storage?
-- J. Spencer, Gaithersburg, MD

Analysts estimate that of the over six billion tons of plastic produced worldwide since the 1950s, we have recycled only nine percent of it and incinerated another 12 percent. The remaining, some 4.8 billion tons of plastic is either still in use, filling up landfills, or littered into streets, streams and eventually the ocean.

About a third of the plastic produced worldwide is for single-use applications (bottles, bags, utensils, food storage, etc.)—and it is these items that most commonly end up on the side of the road. Researchers discussed in a 2019 paper in Nature that if we do nothing to step up flagging efforts to reduce, reuse and recycle plastics, we could have three times as much of it littered into the global environment by 2060.

So, what's an environmentally conscious consumer to do? For starters, avoid getting plastic bags at the store. Either bring your own reusable one or if you need to go disposable, at least opt for paper that can be recycled or composted. And if you are food shopping, gravitate toward the bulk items aisle where you can buy just the right amount without unnecessary extra packaging.

Another way to cut down on single use plastic is ditching plastic straws. Americans go through about 500 million plastic straws daily. Opting for reusable straws (metal, silicone, bamboo or glass, anyone?)—or no straw at all—is one of the simplest ways to cut down on disposable plastic.

According to the non-profit Center for EcoTechnology (CET), the kitchen is one place where you can definitely make some easy adjustments to save plastic. For starters, ditch the plastic wrap; it's difficult to recycle and can clog recycling processing machines. One great alternative is beeswax paper, which is reusable, washable and compostable. (Make sure to wash it with cold water only so the wax doesn't melt.)

"Another alternative to plastic wrap is storing your food in glass storage containers or glass jars," adds CET. "Glass is 100% recyclable and can be recycled endlessly without loss in quality or purity."

Putting dish cloths to use is another way to eschew plastic wrap for keeping produce fresh. Simply wrap up those fruits or veggies in a cloth instead of plastic—or put them in a bowl and cover with a dish cloth and rubber band for a tight seal—and put 'em in the fridge.

One often overlooked environmental downside of the coronavirus situation is that restaurants throw in so much disposable plasticware for to-go and delivery orders—whether customers need it or not. That's why a coalition of 120 environmental groups recently teamed up to send letters to seven national food delivery companies asking they change their default ordering process to one that does not automatically include utensils, napkins, condiments and straws in order to reduce the tsunami of single-use plastic pollution entering our oceans, landfills and incinerators.

Fire Away: How to Prepare For Hunting Season

— News USA —

Although hunting season may still be months away, it's never too early to start checking things off your to-do list. After all, no matter how you slice it, there is a lot of work that goes into getting ready.

Fortunately, for today's hunter, things have changed drastically from decades past. It used to be that hunters slept in tents, heated tin cans of beans over an open fire, wore puffy down parkas to keep warm, and stayed near paved roads in case they got stuck.

Now, lodges, guides, cooks, cell phones and all-terrain vehicles make hunting a more enjoyable and safer experience.

With that in mind, the following tips will help you get prepared for this year's hunting season:

- Check your hunting license. Ensure that it's valid and covers all varieties of wildlife you intend to hunt. Even if you've hunted in the same location, check that permit requirements haven't changed. Regulations get updated yearly, so don't assume that what was valid last year still applies to your favorite watering hole.
- Pack your bag. This tip is two-fold: if you're planning to head out of town, you'll need a hunting permit for that state. If you're staying local, you should pack a bag filled with essential items that will help you survive any unexpected situation, be it weather or something more dire. These include a cell phone, GPS, first aid kit, lighter, maps, binoculars, small rope, pocket knife, bottled water and a few high-energy snacks.
- Bring the right clothing. Depending on where you're headed, you'll need a light or heavy jacket, gloves, hat and layers for nights when the temperatures dip. And don't forget the rain gear. If in a warmer climate, you can dress down with lighter clothes, but whatever the case, don't forget your orange hunting vest. One caveat: wash any clothes you intend to wear with unscented laundry detergent. Animals will (literally) be able to smell you a mile away and not come near you.

Don't Get Hypothermia

— Amazines —

Hypothermia is when the physical body's internal temperature is reduced to an unhealthy degree. The body loses heat and is, for whatever reason, varying elements could be included, is not able to create sufficient heat to sustain itself. Body organs start to slow then eventually stop, and rational reasoning is hindered seriously. Hypothermia could overcome a person quickly, and if it is not dealt with could lead to fatality. Hypothermia can take place when the physical body is exposed to seriously cold climates, icy winds or by falling in cold waters.

The symptoms are generally weakness in the limbs, absent-mindedness, confusion, irrepressible shivering, and slurred speech. Essentially, the body is breaking down due to the exceptionally low temperature it has actually gotten to. While some faunas like polar bears and wolves could thrive in the cold seasons, people, not equipped with thick fur coats, need to be well prepared for frigid climates or possible hypothermia-like circumstances.

Layering up in clothes is the no-duh strategy at staying clear of hypothermia. Constantly keep the head warm, as fifty percent of physical body heat escapes from the head. Remain completely dry, being damp is only going to hurt your chances for getting warmer. Wear an individual flotation device if you are near cold waters and always bring matches in a water-resistant compartment.

If you fall in cold waters, keep your garments on and your head above the surface. Given that the head is such a noteworthy factor in avoiding hypothermia, it should remain as dry as possible. If the shoreline is a short distance, attempt to swim to the coast. Carrying a whistle around your neck might also be very helpful for somebody near by to come and help.

The basic policies are obvious: stay warm and be prepared. Knowing where you are going and maximizing your defenses for the scenario, make certain of a good, hypothermia-free experience.

The Basic Guide to Choose the Hunting Camp Supplies

— Amazines —

If one is looking forward to escape from their hectic schedule, then a wilderness trip can literally give you a sigh of relief. Whether you are a nature lover or a hard-core hunter, you need to check out the hunting and camping supplies. If you are planning to go camping, it can be rewarding to combine it with hunting and enjoy an exceptional outdoor adventure experience.

If you are going for a strong hunting reason, then you need to prepare in that way and keep all the essentials accordingly. It is important to do some research before determining what actually you need to pack.

Check out the weather forecast, food supply, area with the density and wild life intensity etc. Speaking about the shelter, camping tents are crucial for spending the night in comfort and storing your camping supplies and hunting gear. One should go for camping equipment that is easy to set up and take down. Another thing to take care of is to check whether the tent is water resistant. It is the best way to keep yourself covered and have a good camping sleep at night. Using a good quality air pad or sleeping mat offers you the right comfort while sitting or sleeping on the rough ground. Planning a camping trip for hunting is a crucial process as you not only have to carry the food and camping material but you also need to pick up items that are required for hunting.

While speaking about the hunting aspect of camping, it is important to consider that you have air guns and rifle scopes in good condition with you. The air gun helps in hunting for small animals like rabbits and squirrels, and a quality rifle scope does wonders for accuracy. A good holster is necessary if you're hunting with a pistol.

Carrying the necessary gun parts is equally important while going on a hunting trip. Spare magazines, gun cleaning kits, and plenty of ammunition are good ideas. For a successful hunting experience while camping, it is advisable to carry the necessary hunting gear. One should be careful while carrying the hunting accessories along with them and stay alert while being in hunting areas while camping.

2020-21 Forecast: What Hunting Looks Like Across the State

— Fish and Game —

Idaho is a big state with a diverse mix of habitats, elevations and climates, and the state contains a variety of upland game birds. Upland bird populations can vary tremendously on an annual basis, and their health and numbers typically depend on favorable weather conditions, which are often very localized.

That means upland game birds are tough to forecast on a statewide basis. However, Idaho experienced cooler than normal temperatures in June statewide, along with higher than average rainfall. What does that mean for upland hunters? It's a bit of a glass half empty/full situation.

"Cool and wet weather during the hatch is typically not a good indicator of strong numbers in the fall. In general, we're crossing our fingers for good second nesting attempts," said Jeff Knetter, Upland Game and Migratory Game Bird Coordinator. "On the bright side, habitat should be in good shape, and there should be an abundance of insects for brood rearing. Those that made it through June should be in great shape."

There's ample opportunity for upland hunters to pursue a large variety of birds across a variety of landscapes in Idaho, and upland birds in some areas will have fared better than others depending on localized conditions. Fish and Game also recently expanded its pheasant stocking program, providing even more opportunity for upland bird hunters throughout the state. Here is more information about the expanded pheasant stocking program, including some changes hunters should be aware of for the upcoming season.

To provide an idea of what's available this hunting season, Fish and Game's wildlife biologists in each region have compiled an update of what they're seeing and hearing on the ground with bird populations, so hunters can get a look at their favorite areas and quarry.

To learn about upland game bird hunting rules and seasons, and more information, see Fish and Game's Upland Bird Hunting webpage, and here's the digital copy of the 2020-21 Upland Game, Furbearer and Turkey Seasons and Rules booklet.

To find places to hunt upland game, check out the Hunting Access webpage, which includes Fish and Game's Wildlife Management Areas and Access Yes! properties.

Panhandle Region

Snowpack was about average to slightly above average which may have had a minimal effect on over winter survival. The summer has been relatively dry. Nesting success and survival appears to have been good. Pheasants, gray partridge and quail are uncommon and largely restricted to the southern portion of the region.

Clearwater Region

levels cross the Clearwater region. Due to the warmer than normal temperatures, some of this precipitation came as rain, especially in some portions of the region. The impacts of these conditions on upland game bird survival are largely unknown, although no abnormally high mortality rates were detected, nor would they be expected given these types of conditions.

During the spring 2020 nesting and early brood rearing period, weather conditions were cool and abnormally wet through spring and into the early summer. Cool and wet weather can provide for excellent summer brood rearing habitat, but can also result in chick mortality, depending on the timing and intensity of precipitation events. Overall, population trends were positive, although there were a couple of exceptions, depending on the species.

Southwest Region

Spring and early summer conditions were good for brood production for many upland birds. Pheasant numbers along established brood routes are down and production was fair. Quail and gray partridge (Hun) numbers observed during brood surveys for were also down slightly from last year. Chukar hunting will likely vary across the region. Preliminary indications are that dusky grouse had very high carry over survival (lots of adults in harvest) with good brood production. Ruffed grouse had excellent production; most ruffed grouse harvested in SW Idaho thus far have been juvenile birds. Sage-grouse lek counts were down compared to last year and had mixed brood success due to spring rains during the hatch.

Overall, upland bird hunting should be good to excellent with scattered pockets of abundant birds

Magic Valley Region

Mild winter conditions and a dry warm spring were generally favorable for upland bird nesting but the unseasonably warm and dry spring provided for poor brood rearing habitat. Department personnel are reporting average to below average numbers of broods for all upland game species. Generally, bird numbers will be lower than in 2019 and lower than the 10-year average. Hunters are encouraged to contact the Magic Valley Regional Office at 208-324-4359 if they would like to learn more about upland game bird status and trends.

Southeast Region

There was average winter precipitation during the 2019-2020 winter. The early nesting and brood rearing season received above average precipitation resulting in excellent grass and perennial forb growth. Observations have been optimistic with several reports of multiple hens with large broods.

Upper Snake Region

Winter conditions were fairly typical for the Upper Snake Region in the winter of 2019/2020. Snowpack was near the long-term average for most of the region, although snowpack persisted in much of the Snake River plain until late winter/early spring. May was mostly warm and dry, while June temperatures fluctuated greatly, with good precipitation occurring in the middle portion of the month. July and August were dry throughout the region, with average temperatures.

Salmon Region

The 2019-2020 early and mid-winter was mild, but late winter and spring was cooler and wetter than average. Nesting success and chick survival appears below average for the region. Due to heavy overwinter loss in previous years and the poor nest success this year most game bird populations are below average.

Donna's Day Creative family fun

by Donna Erickson

Make Lamplight Polka-Dot Bright

I love lampshades and how they create character in a room. Sometimes they hearken back to a more romantic time. Just walk into a specialty lampshade store and notice the beautiful silk and pleated shades in lovely curving shapes that seem to have popped right out of a Victorian parlor. And all that fringe!

But there's something else about lampshades that I like: Their inexpensive versatility. The simplest kind, once redesigned, can light up a room in more ways than one. This is great news for budget-minded families and for kids who wants to jazz up their bedrooms this fall, or for college-bound teens who are hankering for a more sophisticated space.

Whether you pick up a new, inexpensive plain-white fabric shade at Target or touch up one you already own, you'll quickly discover they're a perfect canvas to showcase your child's bright ideas and creativity. To get started, make your first attempt easy. Why not start with the happiest and simplest of designs -- polka dots?

Here's the stuff you'll need:

- Inexpensive, standard, plain-white lampshade without pleats

- Acrylic paint from craft stores in a color that provides an accent to the room
- Pencil
- Newspaper
- Paintbrush
- Flat buttons and glue gun (optional)

Here's the fun:

1. Lightly sketch circles freehand on the lampshade with the pencil. When you are ready to paint, spread out newspaper on your work surface. Dip your brush in the paint bottle and start filling in all those circles. Go dot to dot from top to bottom. Let dry.

2. Pull out your button jar and hunt for flat buttons in contrasting colors that are smaller than the painted dots, and glue them to the center of a few or all of the dots. Add more buttons around the top and bottom rims of the shade, if you wish. Place on your lamp base.

Extra-bright ideas:

If your kids want to connect more dots, let them go wild. "What else can I decorate?" they may exclaim. Well, they can paint polka dots on wastepaper baskets, planters and placemats. Or, arrange colorful dot stickers on scrapbook covers, picture frames and school binders.

U of I Research Team Earns $6M to Battle Lyme Disease, Surging Tick-Borne Illnesses

— University of Idaho Extension —

University of Idaho researchers are leading a nearly $6 million National Science Foundation (NSF) cooperative agreement, using large and complex data sets to improve prediction and response measures for tick-borne diseases.

According to a Centers for Disease Control and Prevention report published in 2018, tick-borne diseases such as Lyme Disease, Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever and anaplasmosis, with symptoms similar to COVID-19, more than doubled from 22,000 cases in 2014 to 48,000 cases in 2016. Ticks were responsible for 94 percent of vector-borne diseases in 2014.

"Tick-borne disease is widespread, but it's not only a human illness. It can infect animals such as horses and cattle, too," said Xiaogang "Marshall" Ma, computer science assistant professor and research team lead. "For big agricultural states such as Idaho, having the proper response protocols in place is essential to protect our communities as well as our economy."

U of I is part of the four-year NSF project with the University of Nevada, Reno and Dartmouth College. Researchers will design a data framework to organize and clean case data and track movement of tick-borne diseases across the U.S., particularly east to west, where reported cases are low and data points are widespread.

"The thing about tick data is, once you get out of the Midwest and East Coast, these data are very sparse," said Lucas Sheneman, grant participant and director of U of I's data management center, the Northwest Knowledge Network. "Databases that are out there are so siloed, they don't communicate with each other. What we're proposing is developing one comprehensive data framework to offer compatible resources to scientists and the general public."

Ma said the data framework will help researchers analyze the role numerous factors, including outdoor activity, geographical location and climate, play in tick-borne disease transmission. Socioeconomic factors will also be considered.

He said the project will provide online models and resources public health providers and state leaders can use to better predict changes in the number of tick-borne disease cases in their areas and develop proper community response protocols.

A large portion of funding will go toward educational and outreach materials to better educate underserved populations at high risk.

At U of I's Polymorphic Games studio, interdisciplinary student groups will work on a video game and other educational tools aimed at helping K-12 teachers better educate students on the types of tick-borne diseases, risk factors and safety measures.

Existing studies show tick-borne illness such as Lyme Disease disproportionately affect children ages 5 through 10, making a video game a useful platform for educating that audience, said Barrie Robison, grant participant and director of the U of I Institute for Bioinformatics and Evolutionary Studies.

"Using a collaborative, iterative process driven by scientists, we want to create an arsenal of digital projects that can be used by everyone from researchers to middle schoolers who are interested in the topic," he said.

U of I researchers involved in the project include: Ma, Robison, Sheneman, and Chao Fan and Haifeng Liao, assistant professors in the Department of Geography; Hasan Jamil, associate professor in the Department of Computer Science; and Fuchang Gao, professor in the Department of Mathematics.

Funding will also be used to hire a post-doctoral researcher, two doctoral research assistants and several undergraduate interns.

This project was funded to University of Idaho by the National Science Foundation under award number 2019609. The total project funding is $5,830,709.00 of which 100.00% is the federal share.

Ignite Immunity, Clean Naturally With Lemons

— NAPS —

If you're among the increasing number of Americans keen on natural solutions to boost immunity these days, you may be glad to know the answer may be right in your refrigerator—or should be. Loaded with vitamin C and zinc, and with key antioxidant qualities, Limoneira Lemons can play a vital role in helping the immune system adapt to new threats and conditions.

Experts have cited lemons as a way to "reduce the risk of complications from a cold or flu, and reduce inflammation in the body." Experiments have also found that lemon juice can destroy the bacteria of malaria, cholera, diphtheria, typhoid and other deadly diseases.

Lemons are also a boon to any kitchen or DIY beauty routine—plus, they're a handy sustainability tool. Use them to make life simpler without investing in potentially toxic chemicals or overpriced solutions. In fact, beyond their immunity-boosting benefits, lemons provide natural antibacterial and antiseptic properties that let you clean and disinfect your home, naturally.

Here's how to create a useful all-purpose cleaner for your kitchen and bathroom that can help your house smell spring fresh all year: Combine equal parts lemon juice and water in a spray bottle. You can use it nearly anywhere. For wood surfaces, create a polish by mixing one cup of olive oil and one-half cup of lemon juice. Test it first on a small spot.

For other "green cleaning" with lemon tips, visit www.Limoneira.com/cleaning.

HELP US TO RECOGNIZE & HONOR OUR LOCAL VETERANS

Every Veterans Day we print a special section highlighting local veterans. If you, a friend or family member has served in any branch of the military, help us honor them by including them in our 2020 Salute to Veterans.

NOVEMBER 5TH, 2020

Just send us a picture with a name, rank, years served and branch of service, and we'll publish them in a special section in our November 5th, 2020 issue.

If you are mailing a photo and would like it returned, please include a self-addressed stamped envelope, and we'd appreciate it if you include your phone number in case we need to verify anything (the spelling of a name, for example). Please be as complete as possible, and have everything to us by October 30th so we can be sure to get everyone in!

Benefits of Selling Your Junk Car

— Article City —

The day has finally come in which you've decided to get rid of the car that's doing nothing but taking up space on your property. While it may seem like a huge hassle to get rid of your junk car, we've got some good news - you can actually get money for junk cars. That's right, there are people out there willing to pay money for your old clunker, and you don't need to trick them into doing it either.

1. Fast Cash. Typically, when you sell your car to a junkyard, you'll get cash for it the very same day. Of course, if your car isn't in working condition, you shouldn't expect a huge payout- usually, you'll get something to the tune of a few hundred dollars.

However, a few extra hundred dollars can go a long way if you're going through a rough time and struggling to make ends meet. And, the best part is that the money a junkyard pays you is guaranteed. If you were to sell your car privately, you'd have to worry about the check bouncing or about the buyer taking forever to get the money to you. By selling your car for junk, you can have a wad of cash in your hands the same day your vehicle gets picked up.

2. Helps the Environment. This may come as a surprise to you, but selling your car for junk is actually an environmentally-friendly decision.

By leaving an old car in one spot, you run the risk of potentially hazardous chemicals seeping into the ground. These chemicals can eventually make their way to a water supply, posing a threat to not only humans but to our entire ecosystem as a whole. By selling your junk car, you eliminate this problem.

Plus, junk cars are often purchased for their metal, and by using recycled metal, this reduces the pollution that's associated with manufacturing and mining new parts.

3. Easy Removal. Junking a car is perhaps the easiest way to remove it. All you need to do is call up a local junkyard that advertises cash 4 cars, cash 4 used cars, cash 4 junk cars, and your car will be off your lot in a matter of days, if not hours.

Junkyards will tow away your car for free, which can also help save you money on removal services. Plus, once that eyesore is out of your yard, your whole space will look nicer.
