THAT'S NOT RIGHT! They're stealing from you, internet servers, cell phones, appliances, social media websites, buying stuff online, etc. Everywhere you go, everything you do, is being recorded at your expense. Your data, you are the product, everything about you they want to know, so they can make money off you. They sell your data to anyone and everyone who uses your information so that can make money. It's your data, so shouldn't you get a percentage of the money profits? But no, you don't get a dime, even though it's your data, they steal your information and you get absolutely nothing in return. They are the only ones making a profit off of you and what's really incredible, is you give them your data, freely! Tim, 208-217-8942, text only

Questions & Answers About Our Environment

Dear EarthTalk: Are oil companies actually taking steps to cut emissions overall or are their claims mostly just "greenwashing"?

— J.B.S., Waukesha, WI

It's no secret that the climate crisis is intensifying and the world is looking for solutions. The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) stated in its latest report that we are facing a "code red" for humanity if we are unable to make substantive changes. According to the IPCC we must cut our carbon dioxide (CO2) emissions in half by 2030 in order to secure a livable future. Even though there has been a push for emissions reduction, global emissions are not showing signs of declining.

As top contributors of pollution, oil companies are under a microscope. In response to increased pressure, many have begun to make promises that they are working towards being part of the solution. The scientific journal PLOS One reports that major oil companies are using terms like "climate," "low-carbon" and "transition" more frequently in their reports and claim that they are striving to go "carbon neutral."

Carbon neutral is as much of an oxymoron as there can be when applied to oil companies, which begs the question: How do they plan to accomplish this goal? One way they are trying to achieve net-zero emissions is by investing in nature-based carbon credits. Essentially, they are pledging money to plant trees that absorb the CO2 equivalent of the output of their company.

While this solution seems simple enough, common criticisms of oil companies' responses are that net-zero promises are solely based on facility operations and not on the fuel sales themselves; additionally, oil companies have continued to invest in more acreage for the express purpose of extracting more oil—thereby showing their true priorities. Researchers at Tohoku University and Kyoto University conclude that transitioning to clean energy is not occurring because investments and actions by oil companies simply do not match the public promises they are making.

It's important to understand that nature-based credits come with complications. It takes years for trees to mature so it's often unclear how much CO2 they'll absorb. In addition, the lifespan of these trees is not a guarantee either: With increasingly warm and dry conditions, there is an increased likelihood that these trees could die due to drought or fire, in which case the carbon offset becomes worthless.

So, are oil companies simply greenwashing? Some have made minor efforts but it is not nearly enough. That being said, it is important to know how we as individuals can still make a difference. Divesting from oil companies will help reduce the amount of money going towards these polluters. Even if you are not giving money directly to oil companies, your money can indirectly exacerbate the problem. Doing your due diligence to make sure that your bank is not funding oil companies along with other investments in your portfolio can make a world of difference. Reallocating money to make sure you are investing in a clean energy future will help to take the fate of our planet out of the hands of big oil companies.

Recent Grizzly Bear Sightings Highlight The Importance Of Bear Awareness

— Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks —

HELENA – This year Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks has confirmed grizzly bear sightings in several places where grizzlies haven't been seen in recent years, and in some cases more than a century.

Grizzly bear numbers and range continue to expand, particularly in areas between the Northern Continental Divide and the Great Yellowstone ecosystems.

Over the last couple of months, FWP staff have confirmed grizzly bear sightings in the North Hills and Grizzly Gulch areas near Helena, the Elkhorn Mountains near Clancy, near Ulm, in the Pryor Mountains southeast of Billings, the Shields Valley, Little Belt Mountains, near the Judith River east of Denton, and on the lower Dearborn River.

"Vigilance is important for those who live and recreate in the outdoors," said Quentin Kujala, chief of conservation policy for FWP. "This is a busy time of year for bears and our field staff are responding to calls in these particular areas and across the state."

As the grizzly bear population continues to expand across Montana, residents can take the following steps to help protect their property and be safe while recreating.

How to avoid attracting bears to your property

- Store garbage in an IGBC-certified bear resistant bin or other similarly resistant building or container at all times until the day of disposal.
- Avoid leaving food or smell attractants next to windows, doors or outside walls.
- Do not leave out pet food, bird feeders and bird seed or BBQ's.
- Bears are attracted to fruit-bearing trees and bushes, gardens and compost piles. Electric fencing can be effective at deterring bears as well as routinely picking fallen and ripe fruit.
- Secure vulnerable livestock (chickens, goats, sheep) with an electric fence whenever possible.

Tips for recreating in bear country

- Carry bear spray close at hand and know how to use it.
- Travel in groups whenever possible and plan to be back to your vehicle in the daylight hours.
- Avoid carcass sites and concentrations of ravens and other scavengers.
- Watch for signs of bears such as bear scat, diggings, torn-up logs and turned over rocks, and partly consumed animal carcasses.
- Make noise, especially near streams or in thick forest where hearing and visibility is limited. This can be the key to avoiding encounters. Most bears will avoid humans when they know humans are present.
- Don't approach a bear.

Lime Chicken with Honeydew-Peach Salsa

This five-ingredient chicken dish showcases the bright flavors of fresh basil, juicy ripe peaches and honeydew melon. Serve with brown rice for a heart-healthy meal.

- 1 lime
- 2 cups (1/4-inch dice) honeydew melon
- 1 large, ripe peach, pitted and cut into 1/4-inch dice
- 1/2 cup loosely packed fresh basil leaves, coarsely chopped
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 4 medium skinless, boneless chicken breast halves

1. Prepare outdoor grill for covered direct grilling over medium heat.
2. From lime, grate 1-1/2 teaspoons peel and squeeze 2 tablespoons juice. In medium bowl, stir together lime juice, diced melon, diced peach, chopped basil and 1/4 teaspoon salt. Makes 4 cups salsa.
3. Place chicken on plate. Sprinkle chicken on both sides with lime peel, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/2 teaspoon pepper.
4. Place chicken on hot grill rack. Cover grill and cook chicken 10 to 12 minutes or until juices run clear when thickest part of breast is pierced with tip of knife, turning over once. Arrange chicken on platter and serve with salsa. Serves 4.

Sun Exposure Nearly Does in Guinea Pigs

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: I have two guinea pigs. Yesterday, I took them outside to get some sun. When I came back outside about 15 minutes later, they were both lying in their cage, completely stiff, as if they had been dead for hours. I thought they were dead. I brought them inside and was getting everything ready to bury them when one of them stirred very slowly, and then the other. Today, they are not as active, and they aren't eating and only taking a little water when I give it to them through a dropper. What happened to them? Will they be OK? — Analia R., via email

DEAR ANALIA: Guinea pigs, also known as cavies, cannot regulate their body temperature very well. They should never be put into direct sunlight or a hot room. Your pets suffered heat-stroke from being out in the sun, even though it was just a few minutes. This is most often fatal. I'm very surprised that they are both alive.

They need to be treated very gently for the next several days. Contact their veterinarian (one who specializes in exotic pets), but do not bring them until the vet tells you to do so. Moving them can be very stressful. Continue gently giving them water through a dropper or syringe a few drops at a time. Place little bits of cucumber, lettuce or melon nearby; these have high water content and some nutrients.

Cavies are extremely sensitive to sudden temperature changes, loud noises or rough handling. Be gentle with them and keep them in a comfortable location, out of direct sunlight.

Wonderful Day

— Vivian Bogardus —

My friend was lonely and blue, needed someone who needed her too.

So she went to the shelter with love on her mind, to bring home the puppy she was hoping to find.

Then way back in a corner a small dog cried, it was shivering and lonely and broken inside.

She entered it's cage with a tear in her eyes, she cuddled the puppy with sweet lullabies.

He licked at her tears, now falling down freely, and she told him that he was coming home with her today.

After hearing this true story I can honestly say, who rescued who on this wonderful day.

EarthTalk®

From the Editors of E – The Environmental Magazine

Dear EarthTalk: Our forebears decimated the great wild bison herds of the 1800s. Are those remaining today endangered? If so, what are we doing about it? – M. Nadler, Atlanta, GA

Just 150 years ago, 30 million American bison inhabited the Great Plains. However, the species almost went extinct after white frontiersmen moved westward in the 1800s, bringing cattle that spread diseases to bison and altering terrain to build towns, farms and pastures. In 1871 and 1872, hunters killed some 5,000 bison every single day. By 1884, there were little over 300 bison left in the United States.

Bison were vital to Native American societies, which used them for food, clothing, shelter, tools and ceremonies. They maintained a thriving relationship with bison because they hunted in moderation and utilized every part of the bison. And bison were critical to the local ecology. They fertilized the vegetation and ate tall plants, allowing the growth of shorter nutritious grass, which the black-tailed prairie dog relied on as a main source of nutrition. The decline of the bison hurt the prairie dog and other living beings.

Thanks to preservation organizations and private citizens, bison were spared from extinction. In the late 1800s, ranchers captured bison and began breeding their own herds. National parks also helped protect and repopulate bison. The Lacey Act of 1894 was enacted “to protect the birds and animals in Yellowstone National Park, and to punish crimes in said park, and for other purposes.” In 1905, the American Bison Society (ABS) was formed, with U.S. President Theodore Roosevelt as honorary president. He used his authority to help the ABS obtain land and promote bison reintroduction projects, and the bison population rose to roughly 12,000 by the 1920s. More recently, the American bison has made a huge comeback. The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service puts their numbers at “approximately 20,500 Plains bison in conservation herds and an additional 420,000 in commercial herds.” Because their numbers are stable, they are no longer classified as endangered!

Scientists and preservation groups continue working to ensure the bison’s survival. Some public interest organizations, such as Earthjustice, have been defending bison on the legal front. In 2012, Earthjustice defended the transfer of wild bison from Yellowstone to indigenous Fort Peck and Fort Belknap Reservations, in spite of cattle interest groups’ attempts to block such efforts. In 2022, the Bureau of Land Management approved a proposal to allow bison to graze on 63,000 acres of public lands in Montana. This decision is being defended by Earthjustice’s litigation. Hundreds of bison are being transferred to Native American reservations every year in an effort to make reparations to the indigenous tribes that were unjustly stripped of a species so indispensable to their traditions and lifestyles. Today, approximately 82 American and Canadian indigenous tribes have close to 20,000 bison in 65 herds.

Bison still have challenges, such as the spread of brucellosis, which causes abortions, infertility and lowered milk production. Scientists are still trying to find a cure. Tourists have also created problems. Bison calves that make contact with humans can be rejected by their herd, and are often euthanized after such abandonment. But despite this turbulent history, bison numbers are expected to continue to grow, thanks to the work of preservation organizations, government and legal agencies, and individuals!

Balancing Fish And Pelican Conservation

— Idaho Dept. of Fish & Game —

For birds that make their living eating fish, the 1960s and 1970s were a hard time. Bioaccumulation of pesticides in and from their primary prey, weakened eggs and led to widespread hatch failure. Bird populations crashed, causing widespread concern. Fast forward 50 plus years, and many of these bird species have made a remarkable comeback, including Idaho's own American white pelican. A combination of better regulation of some pesticides (like DDT) as well as increased protection through the Migratory Bird Treaty Act have helped tremendously.

While the comeback of pelicans should be celebrated as a national conservation success story, increases in any predator population often lead to concerns about prey populations. Idaho's pelican story is no different. During the 1990s, the number of breeding pelicans in Idaho average about 500 breeding pelicans and concern about pelican effects on fish populations were rare. By 2013, the number of breeding pelicans in Idaho peaked at slightly more than 7,700. Increases of this magnitude raised concern among anglers, which led to more attention from biologists looking to maintain a balance between a predator and its prey and to maintain social tolerance for a predatory bird.

Though pelicans feed primarily on non-game fish, at times, trout can end up on the dinner plate for these efficient fish catchers.

Several intensive research projects were started by Fish and Game biologists. The results indicated that pelicans were having negative effects on certain fish populations in specific locations and decreasing fisheries quality for some anglers. In some cases, the pelicans were causing declines of native cutthroat trout – Idaho's state fish or eating a high proportion of stocked trout. The hardest hit areas were the Blackfoot River drainage, several hatchery-supported water bodies across southern Idaho, and Silver Creek. But in contrast, pelicans had little impact on game fish populations in other locations.

Weirs are used to capture migrating cutthroat, where they are tagged to learn about survival and predation.

Fish and Game's biologists worked cooperatively with federal conservation partners like the US Fish and Wildlife Service and Department of Agriculture to develop a plan to manage conflicts associated with pelicans. This plan included efforts to reduce conflict between birds, fish, and anglers and has included the use of a wide variety of techniques to reach a more desired balance.

Monitoring both bird and fish populations is a central component to this program. Statewide pelican counts are completed from airplanes every few years to track how pelican numbers and locations are changing over time. The majority of birds are counted near breeding colonies located at Minidoka National Wildlife Refuge, Blackfoot/Chesterfield reservoirs, and Island Park Reservoir, though non-breeding birds are distributed throughout most of the state. Also, juvenile pelicans are tagged at most colonies to learn about survival and movement to better understand pelican biology and responses to management efforts. On the fish side of the equation, biologists are tracking changes in fish populations and using specialized tags to estimate pelican predation. This information is helping to develop strategies to improve fish survival and maintain or increase populations.

In addition, biologists and partners deter pelicans from using certain locations or waterbodies where predation is a big problem. Scaring off pelicans (called "hazing") might include things like using loud noises, lasers, or simply by the presence of people walking nearby. Hazing often requires diligence, even round-the-clock activity, as once pelicans find a favorite fishing spot, just like us, they don't like to leave it. If done effectively, hazing eventually leads to pelicans learning to use other habitats that are less popular with anglers due to more abundant non-game fish populations, which addresses conflict without the need to further reduce pelican populations.

Attaching wing tags to juvenile pelicans allows monitoring of survival and movement.

While hazing has worked well in some cases, other more aggressive methods have also been necessary to reduce predation and effects on fish populations elsewhere. In areas where the pelican population is too large and predation is a big problem, fences are used to limit the amount of nesting habitat that pelican may use eventually decreasing local pelican predation in the long run. Furthermore, some pelican eggs are oiled to reduce nest success. This helps stabilize populations and prevent them from continuing to increase. With more substantial conflict, pelicans are lethally controlled, which serves to reduce predation to a sustainable level or otherwise reinforce hazing efforts.

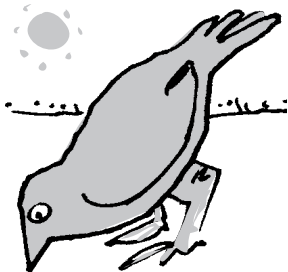

More work is needed, but these efforts have already started to pay off. As of 2022, the number of breeding pelicans has decreased to slightly more than 3,000, and fish survival has improved. At the same time, Idaho still supports healthy pelican populations. Finding the desired balance between a protected bird with a remarkable comeback story, native fish species, and introduced game fishes is a non-stop, tight-rope walking act. Circumstances and bird behavior are constantly changing and will continue to do so, requiring that the department remain committed to managing birds, fish, and anglers.

Conserving cutthroat trout, Idaho's state fish, is important to anglers and biologists.

A Growing Number in Spokane Experiencing Food Insecurity

— Salvation Army Spokane —

The number of households receiving food from The Salvation Army Food Bank in Spokane has substantially increased! In February of this year, it was 1,318. In June, it grew to 2,898.

"Everything has gone up dramatically, except wages. And the Federal Government stopped providing people with extra Covid food stamp funds," said Cheryl Ward-Thompson, program manager of The Salvation Army's food bank.

Food distributed during the first half of 2023 rose by almost 100,000 pounds! It was 118,620 lbs. in February, but increased to 217,350 lbs. in June.

On average, The Salvation Army's food bank serves 140 households per day each receiving about 75 lbs. of food. That comes out to approximately 10,500 lbs. of food a day!

Helping to address the dramatic increase in need are local leaders of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The Church is sending 40,000 pounds of shelf-stable food, which will arrive at 9am August 8th at The Salvation Army, 204 E. Indiana Ave., Spokane.

"We are so pleased to be able to help, and our hearts go out to those in our community who are struggling with food insecurity," said Jennifer Hicks, communications director for the Greater Spokane Region for the Church.

The 53-foot semi-truck carrying the food, which is grown and processed by the Church, will originate from Welfare Square in Salt Lake City. Church members throughout the region and world donate to the food program. The Church has over 52,000 members in the Inland Northwest.

Church members facing food insecurity are served by their local ecclesiastical leaders and sent to the Church-run Bishop's Storehouse in Spokane Valley for food supplies. They do not have to draw on local food banks for help. "We take care of our own," said Hicks.

Summertime Trout Slam

— Idaho Dept. of Fish & Game —

It's not too late to find native trout

"Trout Slam" programs aren't new these days. There's the Wyoming Cutt-Slam, and also the Utah Cutthroat Trout Slam, and the well-known California Heritage Trout Challenge. OK fine – even Nevada has their own Native Fish Slam too!

But when it comes to fishing, bigger is better! That's where the Western Native Trout Challenge comes in as the heavy weight, combining the best of all the western trout slam programs. Seriously, what other trout slam program offers the challenge to catch up to 18 species of native trout across 12 states from Alaska to Arizona?

The Western Native Trout Challenge is a multi-state trout slam hosted by our friends at the Western Native Trout Initiative (WNTI, find their website at westernnativetrout.org). WNTI is part of the bigger National Fish Habitat Partnership program, working across 12 Western states to conserve native trout. They work hard to fund conservation efforts such as habitat restoration, removing migration barriers, fish population surveys and trout education/outreach.

Westslope Cutthroat Trout are found in the Salmon River basin all the way north into Canada.

By taking on the Challenge, you can support native trout conservation. From the $25 registration, $23 of that goes directly back into funding trout habitat restoration projects! This is a win-win for angler and trout alike! Idaho has 5 native trout eligible for the Challenge: Redband, Westslope cutthroat, Yellowstone cutthroat, and Bonneville cutthroat, and Bull trout. Remember, you'll need at least 6 species from 4 states to complete the basic achievement level, and it gets harder from there, so pick wisely!

Now that rivers are down to low summer flows, late summer and early fall is a great time to seek native trout. Using tools like the Idaho Fishing Planner or the Trout Challenge Maps is a good first step to finding the species you are after. Cutthroat and Redband are easier to catch and are widely distributed across the state. Bull Trout often migrate long distances and are less common, so be prepared to hunt for them. It's been a hot summer, so I recommend fishing higher elevations, and focus on fishing early or late in the day when water temperatures are cooler and fish are biting best.

Size doesn't matter for the Western Native Trout Challenge! Species like this handsome Redband Trout can be found in many streams across central and southern Idaho.

Tackling the Challenge is all about making an adventure that is all your own. You'll get to experience some of the best wild places throughout the West while you try to catch native trout in their original habitats. Along the way, you'll learn a lot about native trout, where they live, and some of the many challenges they are facing these days. If you are lucky, you might even find a new secret spot.

For more information and registration details, visit the Western Native Trout Challenge website at westernnativetroutchallenge.org.

- Find fish distribution by filtering for species in the Idaho Fishing Planner (idfg.idaho.gov/ifwis/fishingplanner/filter)
- See maps of where these fish live on the Trout Challenge Maps Page at <http://tiny.cc/gbh9vz>

The Bull Trout - one of the more elusive of Idaho's 5 trout species eligible for the Western Native Trout Challenge.

Sneak Some Zucchini Into Your Neighbor's Porch Day

August 8th
— National Day Calendar —

Sneak Some Zucchini Into Your Neighbor's Porch Day on August 8th offers gardeners a way to rid themselves of extra produce. For some, this day offers a way to rid their garden of an overproducing squash plant.

Did you know that zucchini was a fruit? Well, if you're a gardener, you know this fact already. You also know that zucchini grows in abundance and is ready for harvest in August. Zucchini growers also know that one plant of zucchini allows you to share this wonderful treat!

Zucchini is also incredibly helpful with weight loss. The produce is low in calories, high in fiber, and full of water. As such, when you eat it, your tummy doesn't feel empty. Hopefully, you are less likely to overeat. If your zucchini produces well, add it soups, salads, and baked goods.

When you receive a zucchini on your porch, savor the delicious squash. Eat if fresh by slicing it. Other ways to use it are:

- To preserve zucchini, shred it and freeze it in freezer bags to use later.
- Baking it into quick breads and delivering it to a neighbor will also please them.
- Add zucchini slices to tomato sauces or pasta dishes.
- Make Ratatouille. You won't be disappointed.
- Grill the zucchini. Add garlic and parmesan.

How To Observe Sneak Some Zucchini Into Your Neighbor's Porch Day

Sneak some zucchini into your neighbor's porch. Don't be surprised if your gift delights the recipient, either. # Sneak Some Zucchini Into Your Neighbor's Porch FAQ

- Q. What kinds of zucchini are there?
- A. Zucchini come in a variety of shapes, sizes and colors. Each variety also develops its own flavor.
- Q. Is zucchini good raw?
- A. Yes! Zucchini can be eaten raw. Add it to a salad or lightly pickle it for a crisp fresh taste.
- Q. Are zucchini flowers edible?
- A. Yes, they are. They can be eaten raw or cooked.
- Q. Is zucchini native to North America?
- A. Yes, the plant grew wild in North America and was later taken across the Atlantic Ocean by European explorers.
- Q. Does zucchini grow in limited space?
- A. Yes! Certain varieties grow well in containers. Consider Cube of Butter, Max's Gold, or Astia. Use light, well-drained soil and place in full sun for best results. Be sure to water daily until the seeds sprout and then water when the top layer of soil dries, usually every day when in a sunny location but don't over-water. Fertilize once a month.

Heart Attacks Occur After Treatment of Infections

DEAR DR. ROACH: My mom had a throat and palate infection that was treated in 2017, and about two weeks later, she had a heart attack. In 2023, she had pneumonia, and was briefly hospitalized and treated, but again about two weeks later, she had another heart attack. We asked her cardiologist if there is a relationship between either the infections themselves or the treatment of infections and heart attacks, but he was not aware of any. This seems too unlikely to be a coincidence. What is your experience on this?— A.C.S.

ANSWER: A heart attack happens when the demand for blood from the heart is greater than the ability of the blood vessels can provide. In practice, this almost always means that there are blockages in the blood vessels. However, an increase in the workload of the heart, such as strenuous exercise or an infection (fever tends to increase heart rate, and the blood flow from the heart usually increases with serious infection), can be what leads a person to have a heart attack. It's possible that this is what happened with your mom. The timing of two weeks after the event is longer than expected, but it's possible.

Whether from chronic infection or inflammatory conditions like rheumatoid arthritis, inflammation in the blood increases the risk of heart disease in the long term, so if there is a connection, and it's not just coincidental, that would be the most likely cause.

DEAR DR. ROACH: You wrote about the dangers of testosterone replacement in men over 70 in your column a few months ago. Could you please describe the dangers of this again?

My husband is 73 and injects testosterone every 10 days or so. He's not feeling too well overall, but he doesn't know why. He's been to the cardiologist, but the studies came back fine. He says he feels nerves in his stomach and a bit of shortness of breath. He's also tired and without much energy. — E.D.

ANSWER: There are clear dangers with excess testosterone use, especially in older men. Some men use very high doses of testosterone or other androgens for muscle building, and this can cause heart damage, blood clots and stroke. I strongly do not recommend doing this, but it is generally used illicitly.

By contrast, for men in whom testosterone therapy is given appropriately, the dangers are quite small, and in most men, the benefits outweigh the risks. Men should have a clear reason to receive testosterone therapy, such as having low bone density, low libido, loss of body hair, or development of breast tissue, in addition to repeatedly low testosterone levels (including a level taken between 8 a.m. and 10 a.m. when testosterone levels are highest). In these men, the goal is to stabilize the testosterone level, and the risks of the catastrophic outcomes listed above appear to be very small, or even zero. Testosterone levels should also be measured during therapy.

I can't speculate on the cause behind your husband's symptoms. Nonspecific symptoms, such as low energy, can be caused by low testosterone, but unless there are more specific symptoms of low testosterone, I generally do not recommend testosterone replacement.

Dr. Roach regrets that he is unable to answer individual questions, but will incorporate them in the column whenever possible. Readers may email questions to ToYourGoodHealth@med.cornell.edu.

Lemon Cookie Cups for a Summer Dessert

Dessert is extra-special for kids when it comes in an edible container.

Here's a cute little lemony crisp cookie cup, ideal for filling with pudding, fresh fruit or ice cream. Top the filling with candles if there is a birthday party in the house.

You also might want to make a batch as a brunch dessert on one of these hot summer days. They'll be perfect ... and memorable with a scoop of icy sorbet nestled in toasted shredded coconut "grass."

Kids can be involved from the start with this thin cookie recipe that is easy to combine, using just flour, powdered sugar, eggs and lemons. No need for a mixer. So, grab a big spoon, a whisk, a grater and mixing bowls to get started.

LEMON COOKIE CUPS

Makes 20 cookie cups

- 1-1/3 cups all-purpose flour
- 3/4 cup powdered sugar
- 3 egg whites
- 2 egg yolks
- 1 tablespoon grated lemon zest
- 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 or 3 whole washed lemons for shaping cookie cups

Position rack in the upper third of the oven. Pre-heat oven to 350° F. Cover two cookie sheets with parchment paper. Let your child measure and sift flour and sugar in a mixing bowl.

Use a whisk to lightly beat egg whites in one small bowl. In another bowl, lightly beat yolks. Add egg whites, yolks, lemon zest, juice and vanilla to the flour and sugar mixture. Mix well until smooth with a large spoon. Let set 20 minutes.

Meanwhile, let your child draw five 5-inch circles on the back of the parchment paper with a pencil, using a saucer as a guide. Turn the paper over, with the circles showing through. Repeat for second cookie sheet.

Drop a heaping tablespoon of batter in the middle of each of the circles. An adult should carefully spread the batter to fill the shape. It will be very thin. (I use an angled icing spatula.)

Bake for 5-6 minutes, or until edges brown. Remove cookies quickly, and with the assistance of your child, form cupped shapes with the bottom sides of the cookies up, using the lemons as molds. Hold them for a few seconds until the shape is set; then place on a cooling rack. (Use a clean towel between your hands and the hot cookie to form the fluted shape, if you wish.)

Repeat with remaining dough.

Serve as individual desserts filled with fruit, pudding, flavored yogurt, ice cream or sorbet. Enjoy!

National Sunflower Day First Saturday in August

— National Day Calendar —

Celebrating happiness is what we do at National Day Calendar. So, it makes perfect sense to celebrate the first Saturday in August as National Sunflower Day. Join us all day as we spread joy about the happiest flower on earth.

Sunflowers are said to be a symbol of adoration, loyalty, and longevity. Their bright yellow color is a sign of happiness, friendship, and intelligence. Much like the sun, sunflowers mirror vibrancy and give off an energy of life. National Sunflower Day reminds us to show our inner sunshine, while taking the opportunity to share one of the earth's most beautiful flowers.

Historically, sunflowers have been around since about 1000 BC. Native Americans used sunflowers as a valuable food source, oil, paint, textile, and during ceremonies. Interestingly, some archaeologists believe sunflowers may have been cultivated before corn. Today, sunflowers are still being used as a source of food, oils, and beauty treatments.

8 Sunflower Uses

1. Cooking oil
2. Birdfeeders
3. Sunflower seeds
4. Salad mixes
5. Tea
6. Medicinal purposes
7. Skin care
8. Crafts

The U.S. is a massive producer of sunflowers. In fact, this bright, beautiful flower is a major crop in both North Dakota and South Dakota. In 2022, North Dakota produced 762 billion pounds of sunflowers. With the average height of a sunflower being five to six feet tall, a sunflower head can grow bigger than a human head. As the weight of the sunflower head becomes heavy, it begins to fall forward causing the petals to fall off. After the petals fall off and the heads freeze, harvest begins on the sunflower. On average, one sunflower can produce up to 2,000 sunflower seeds per head!

Position requires cleaning of high-end homes, grocery shopping, delivery, and airport transportation. Pay DOE, Monday-Friday with occasional weekend work. Tony, 208-755-4933

3 Main Types of Sunflowers

1. Oils, which are smaller seeds used for cooking.
2. Confectionery, which are ones we love to enjoy at ballgames.
3. Ornamental, which are the smaller ones found at florists.

Sunny Days

Sunflowers are a unique flower. Though many flowers are known to look for the sun for nutrients, the size of the sunflower presents an opportunity to visually see how it follows the sun movements throughout the day. During early mornings, sunflowers can be seen sort of in a sleep position slightly bent downwards. However, as the sun begins to shine, they slowly find the bright sun to face their growing day. Interestingly, the sunflower tends to face east, avoiding the hot sun. In fact, some scientists assume it is a natural defense of the sunflower to avoid the hot sun. Sunflower enthusiasts assume their perfect flower is not only the happiest flower, but also the most intelligent, too.

August is considered peak season for seeing blooming sunflowers. National Sunflower Day is a perfect time to experience the beauty of vast fields of golden awe. Brilliant fields of yellow flowers welcoming the morning sun can be found throughout North Dakota. In fact, seeing fields of sunflowers blanket the earth will lift the spirits of those witnessing this amazing wonder of breathtaking beauty.

FOLLOW THE SUN

1. Take a drive to view fields of sunflowers to see their true beauty in mass.
2. Give a bouquet of sunflowers to a friend to brighten their day.
3. Add sunflower sprouts and seeds to your salad.
4. Plan a road trip to North Dakota in August and coordinate places to stop to visit sunflower fields and get updates from local famers who produce sunflowers.

Share your photos on sunflowers on social media using #NationalSunflowerDay.

FOUNDING NATIONAL SUNFLOWER DAY

The National Sunflower Association and North Dakota Tourism introduced the idea to create National Sunflower Day in 2022. After forming a partnership, National Sunflower Day became reality in 2023. Each year on the first Saturday in August, we intend to spread joy about the happiest flower on earth during National Sunflower Day. This collaboration is a special to effort help spread the word about the agricultural giant North Dakota is in growing sunflowers, and especially to promote happiness.

A partnership between the National Sunflower Association and North Dakota Tourism gives anyone who visits the state a chance to see the thousands of acres of fields every year in late summer with their Sunflower Map. This map includes exact coordinates of sunflower fields across the state and weekly updates from the farmers who produce them on how the bloom is going. Visitors can time their visits when the fields are at their most beautiful. Some of the fields even include a sunflower mailbox full of free and locally grown and processed sunflower kernels.

Statewide Trout Stocking Highlights For August 2023 Panhandle, Clearwater and Southwest Regions

— Idaho Dept. of Fish & Game —

Approximately 90,000 catchable-sized rainbow trout will be stocked throughout the state this August

Many of Idaho's lakes and ponds are soon going to be bolstered with Idaho Fish and Game stocking roughly 90,000 catchable-sized rainbow trout this August. Wondering if the stocking trucks are going to be backing up to your favorite fishing hole? We asked our Fish and Game hatchery staff to boil down some of the most notable stocking highlights coming to your local fishery this month.

Many of these fisheries highlighted below are easy to access, family-friendly fishing destinations. All you need to get started is a fishing license and some basic tackle. Annual adult fishing licenses cost around $30, junior licenses (ages 14-17) cost $16, and youth (under 14) fish for free. Go to Fish and Game's online vendor to buy a license.

Fishing for stocked rainbow trout can be a great way to introduce budding anglers to the sport by using simple, inexpensive setups like worm/marsh-mallow combinations or commercial baits like PowerBait® or Crave, placed either near the bottom or below a bobber; and as anglers know, there's nothing quite like a trout fighting on the end of your line. The Learn to Fish webpage offers diagrams for basic bait rigs at <https://idfg.idaho.gov/fish/learn-to>

Most Idaho waters are open to fishing year-round, but some may have slightly different rules. Be sure to pick up a 2022-2024 Idaho Fishing Seasons and Rules Booklet – available at any Idaho Fish and Game office or most sporting goods stores statewide– or download online to look at season dates, special regulations and bag limits at <https://idfg.idaho.gov/rules/fish> access pond offers good fishing opportunity.

Elsie Lake – 900 rainbow trout: This lake offers excellent fishing for anglers of all levels and you will also find a beautiful setting. It's a drive-to mountain lake but the road is mountainous and rough.

Lower Glidden Lake – 900 rainbow trout: This is a beautiful drive-to alpine lake. It's a great spot for anglers of all levels and a scenic choice for small watercraft (electric motors only).

Clearwater Region

Karolyn's Pond – 800 rainbow trout: Located at the Clearwater Hatchery's satellite facility on the Red River, this is a pretty pond with grassy banks and a dock for fishing. It's small enough that an angler can cast to any part of the pond from shore. There is a Forest Service campground a bit further up Red River Road, so make it an overnight camping trip.

Southwest Region (McCall)

Browns Pond (Airport Pond) – 1,500 rainbow trout: This small pond offers easy access to fishing on the southern edge of the McCall airport and is hidden from the road.

Rowlands Pond (Scout Pond) – 1,500 rainbow trout: This is a small (but pretty) pond in the woods close to McCall. Anglers will find good bank fishing in this peaceful setting.

Boise River (Middleton to Eagle Road) – 1,440 rainbow trout

Boise River (Arrowrock to MF/NF Confluence) – 1,750 rainbow trout

Lowman Ponds – 600 rainbow trout: Enjoy good mountain fishing along the South Fork Payette River, where diverted water from Richards Creek keeps the ponds cool through the summer.

Marsing Pond – 450 rainbow trout: This pond is located within a city park. Take the whole family, your fishing gear, some lunch and enjoy shady picnic areas alongside the Snake River.

Middle Fork Payette River – 1,500 rainbow trout: Access is great along a well-traveled road with good camping areas nearby. Redband trout, brook trout and hatchery rainbows support this fine fishery.

North Fork Boise River – 1,750 rainbow trout: This is a popular mountain river where anglers can target a variety of fish (rainbow trout, brook trout, cutthroat trout, and whitefish). Catch rates are generally very good.

South Fork Payette River – 1,500 rainbow trout: Stocking locations include: Mountain View Campground, near the fire station at Jolene Drive; Helende Campground; 10 Mile Bridge (immediately adjacent to Lowman Ponds); and near Grandjean.

National Root Beer Float Day August 6th

— National Day Calendar —

On August 6th, National Root Beer Float Day tells us to float a scoop of vanilla ice cream in an ice-cold mug of frothy root beer. The classic beverage creates a creamy treat loved by generations!

Also known as the "Black Cow," the root beer float got its start in Colorado in a mining camp. Frank J. Wisner of Cripple Creek, Colorado, gets the credit for inventing the "Black Cow" way back in August of 1893.

One night Wisner, owner of the Cripple Creek Cow Mountain Gold Mining Company, was staring out the window and thinking about the line of soda waters he was producing for the citizens of Cripple Creek when he came upon an idea. The full moon that night shined on the snow-capped Cow Mountain and reminded him of a scoop of vanilla ice cream. He hurried back to his bar and scooped a spoonful of ice cream into the children's favorite flavor of soda, Myers Avenue Red Root Beer. After trying, he liked it and served it the very next day. It was an immediate hit.

Wisner named the new creation, "Black Cow Mountain" but the local children shortened the name to "Black Cow".

Since its inception, hundreds of thousands of root beer floats have been enjoyed around the country each day.

How To Observe National Root Beer Float Day

Gather up some root beer and ice cream and mix up the perfect root beer float. Enjoy a root beer float over lunch or dinner at your favorite restaurant. Use #RootBeerFloatDay to post on social media and spread the word.

If a root beer float is your favorite ice cream soda, National Ice Cream Soda Day is on June 20 so you can enjoy it twice!

The Foot Racer

— by Chloe, age 14 —

One day, a troubled man sat on his couch with his head to one side. You see, this man had no legs and before he lost them in an accident, he had been a very good racer! So, as he sat there, he thought and thought and thought. And suddenly, he had an idea.

“Since I have no feet, I must build one so I can race once again!” he exclaimed.

And that was how a man with no feet came upon a large one and won every foot race in the world!

(His friends helped him build it of course, so we must give them credit too.)

Oh yes! When he began to realize it wasn't right for him to be racing in his foot, he decided to race in car races!

Editor's note: This story was submitted along with her entry for the Nickel's Worth Dream Car contest, and we enjoyed it so much we wanted to share it with everyone. Chloe adds: "I think this car would be very fun to drive to youth group, so that is why I would like it as a dream car!"
