The Garden Bug

These plants display great beauty in the garden during late summer and early fall when not much else is blooming. Ginger lilies are not true lilies, but instead are a distant cousin of gingerroot that's used in cooking. They are beloved for their graceful, orchid-like blossoms that remind some of butterfly wings. In fact, butterflies love slurping their nectar, so a ginger lily is a great choice for a pollinator garden with some shade. It can grow up to 6 feet tall and spread out almost as wide.

playing bean bags, walking on stilts or stacking wood for a night around the fireplace, games and chores can be fun learning opportunities.

Simple techniques from earlier days can be found at living museums, history museums, libraries and in your own homes with treasured photos, antiques in the attic and stories from your kids' great-grandparents.

To get started, here's a way of taking back history with your family any time of year. Make your own butter!

SHAKE AND MAKE BUTTER

Here's the stuff you'll need:

- 1 empty, small clean jar with a lid, such as a baby-food or jam jar
- heavy whipping cream
- muffin, biscuit or cracker
- salt (optional)

Now, here's the fun:

Pour the cream into the jar, leaving space at the top. Screw the lid on tightly. Show your child how to hold the jar in both hands and shake, shake, shake.

It's great exercise, and you may notice your child might run out of steam. That's the time to pass it on to someone else to continue the shaking. Eventually, chunks of butter will form.

Spoon out the chunks into a bowl and add a few sprinkles of salt, if you wish. Spread the butter on a warm muffin, biscuit or cracker, and talk about life in an earlier time when butter didn't magically appear on the grocery store's dairy shelf.

Footprints in the History of Pend Oreille County

James J. Hill

— Faith McClenney —

In the early 1900s, Pend Oreille Valley resources included miles of prime old-growth forests, meadows, gold, zinc, silver, gold and other minerals waiting to be mined, water in a river, lakes and streams, and an abundance of wild life which lured hundreds of settlers. The Homestead Act of 1862 allowed a settler 160 acres of land free if they lived on the land five years, improved it and produced a crop. This wilderness region was full of opportunities.

However, eager ambitious settlers faced a number of obstacles before achieving success in the promised land, among them were clearing the land and transportation of people and goods. The prime forests were a gigantic obstacle for the settler with limited means and tools. The large trees had to be cut down, the huge logs either had to be sold if possible or burned and the stumps removed by whatever means were available. Once he cleared the land there was the need to somehow get his crops, logs, or cordwood, etc. to a market. There were steamboats but they were not always dependable during all the seasons of the year.

In this issue I am going to write about a man who never lived in Pend Oreille County but whose railroad made a tremendous change in the history of the county. James Jerome Hill was born 1838 in Canada near Ontario. He had only nine years of formal schooling but though years of hard work and persistence he developed a keen business sense that were his strengths which served him all his life. At the age of 18 he started working as a bookkeeper handling freight transfers dealing with railroads and steamboats in St. Paul. He gained experience in all phases of the transportation business and he learned the banking business by becoming a member of several major bank boards of directors. He often bought out bankrupt businesses, built them up again and then resold them. He was a hands-on, detail obsessed manager whose philosophy for success was "work, hard work, intelligent work, and then more work. He became involved in several short railroad lines where he encouraged homesteaders to settle along his rail lines. He became a railroad man who also looked for businesses that would support his railroads.

Between 1883 and 1889, he built railroads across Minnesota to Montana. When he was working on a new railroad, he personally would go out on horseback to check out the best location for the route. When there wasn't enough business along his tracts, he bought out businesses and placed them along his railroads.

In 1889 Hill decided that he would build a continental railroad. He wanted a railroad that had the shortest distance, lowest grades and fewest curves. He had heard about the Marias Pass 5, 213 ft. in southern Montana. It eventually shortened the Transcontinental Railroad by a hundred miles. Hill went out and personally checked out the route before it was started. (Present route of Highway 2)

The Great Northern Railroad came through Newport in 1892-1893 and provided the much-needed transportation for hundreds of settlers. Soon trains roared through the county hauling passengers, mail, logs, lumber, farm produce and ore to Spokane. In the summer, The Great Northern Tour Train had cruises for folks to enjoy picnics on the rock islands at Albeni Falls. Scores of small communities sprang up along the tracks. The Great Northern Railroad transformed the wilderness.

James J. Hill and the Great Northern Railroad left footprints in the history of Pend Oreille County.

An example of James Hill's business sense was when in 1898 he purchased control of large parts of the Mesabi Range iron mining district in Minnesota along the rail lines. He then began large-scale shipment of ore to the steel mills of the Midwest.

Full Fishing Closure Begins Saturday At Mouth Of Missoula's Rattlesnake Creek

— Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks —

MISSOULA – A full fishing closure will go into effect at the mouth of Rattlesnake Creek, where it enters the Clark Fork River in Missoula, beginning Saturday, Aug. 13.

The closure applies to water on the Clark Fork River and Rattlesnake Creek within a 100-yard radius of the mouth of the creek. The temporary closure will protect bull trout from the additional stress of fishing while water temperatures stay warm.

Bull trout require cold water to survive and tend to congregate in areas such as the mouth of Rattlesnake Creek, where waters temperatures are lower than the river, to seek refuge. This location also receives consistent fishing pressure, adding more stress to the fish in the area.

Bull trout numbers are low in Rattlesnake Creek and surrounding areas, and removing any stress or than can contribute to mortality is important to the population.

Restrictions are also in place for other waterbodies. Anglers can find a statewide list of current restrictions at fwp.mt.gov/news/current-closures-restrictions.

All stress to fish at this time of year is cumulative, and anglers should consider fishing in cooler waters during times of low flows and higher water temperatures in rivers. Anglers can help reduce stress for fish by following these practices when catching and releasing fish where fishing is allowed, though fish mortality may still occur:

- Fish during the coolest times of day, where permitted.
- Land the fish quickly.
- Wet your hands before handling the fish.
- Keep the fish in water as much as possible.
- Remove the hook gently. Using artificial lures with single and barbless hooks can make hook removal faster and easier.
- If the fish is hooked deeply, you may have to cut the line at the fish's mouth or consider keeping it if regulations allow.
- Let the fish recover before releasing it.

Successfully Caring for Orchids is Easier Than You May Think

— StatePoint Media —

Orchid Care 101
What You Need to Know

Orchids are thought to be fussy and hard to maintain. Some varieties live up to this reputation, but the popular Phalaenopsis (moth) orchid is an ideal houseplant for anyone. Here's a look at how to keep your orchid blooming, happy and thriving, even if you think you don't have a green thumb.

Pick your orchid.
Phalaenopsis orchids come in a variety of sizes, including mini, petite, premium and waterfall. They also come in a wide range of colors. Some even have patterns. Big or small, bright or neutral, there's an orchid for everyone.

Keep it cool-ish.
Orchids like temperate conditions. They thrive in daytime temperatures between 65°F and 80°F. At night, temperatures between 55°F and 65°F are ideal when triggering new blooms. Also, orchids love humidity. Dry winter furnace heat can be tough on them, so consider keeping them in a well-lit bathroom or using a humidifier during cold months.

Don't over or under water it.
Too much water is the primary cause of orchid failure, causing rapid root decay. Just Add Ice for Orchids, the largest Phalaenopsis grower in the United States, has solved this problem. Their full-size, premium orchids require you to put three ice cubes in the pot once a week. It's that simple.

Bring on the blooms.
On average, orchids bloom last for about three months. Once the flowers wilt and if the stem is still green, trim the flower stem an inch above a triangular-shaped node lower on the flower stem and continue watering with ice cubes as usual. Keep the plant in a cooler environment until a new flower spike branches from a node along the stem. When a new spike appears, remove your orchid to its normal setting.

Shed a little light.
Orchids need light to flourish. But, not direct sunlight. It's too harsh and can burn the plant's leaves. Instead, orchids are happiest in plenty of indirect light so they can bloom. Orchids that don't receive enough light won't flower.

Some people shy away from orchids because they appear fragile, but mostly these gorgeous plants are just misunderstood.

Even if you've never owned a houseplant or tried your hand at gardening, you can successfully grow Phalaenopsis (moth) orchids. Perfect for beginners, they are easy to grow and require minimal care. To get started, check out the tips and resources available at justaddiceorchids.com.

Orchid care is easier than you may think. All you need is a bit of knowledge to keep your orchid happy and healthy for successful blooms again and again.
