WHO IS IT THAT DOESN'T want you to study the Bible? Christ or Satan? The Bible says that it is 'Satan who deceives the whole world' (Revelation 12:9). Christ says that the only way to be saved, is through Bible study. 90% of modern day church leaders will only give you what they want you to see. They will never tell you to study the Bible for yourselves. The Bible says that the truth will set you free, and the truth can only be found in complete Bible study, both Old Testa-ment and New Testament. And so Satan will give you every excuse possible to prevent you from Bible study. Tim, 208-217-8942 text only, scriptures

Don't Commit License Fraud When Buying Your Licenses and Tags

— Fish and Game —

One of the most common fish and game violations conservation officers investigate doesn't occur in the field, but at the license vendor when a person makes a fraudulent license purchase, or purchases of a wrong class license, such as when a nonresident purchases a resident license using some sort of false information.

The reasons behind these fraudulent license purchases are usually as diverse as the people committing the crime. In recent years, there were more than a thousand wrong-class license violations detected by officers. The underlying reason for trying to cheat the system is typically to save money while maximizing use of Idaho's hunting and fishing opportunities.

To be an Idaho resident for hunting, trapping, and fishing purposes, you must have lived in Idaho for the past six months, and have either a valid Idaho driver's license, or if you are a nondriver, a valid Idaho Identification card. Property ownership and payment of property taxes alone are not enough to establish residency.

The penalties for buying a wrong class license can be very high, including stiff fines and restitution to Fish and Game for the revenue lost because of the illegal purchase, and a mandatory license revocation in nearly all 50 states. During one wrong class license investigation, officers discovered that a husband and wife had been cheating the system by using the address of a friend to purchase resident hunting and fishing licenses. Both were sentenced to a one year loss of licenses and a total reimbursement to Fish and Game of nearly $12,000.

If you have any questions about whether you qualify as a resident, contact your local Fish and Game Regional Office.

Innovia Foundation Announces a powerful force for change, and she will be deeply The Sandy Williams Fund For The Carl Maxey Center

— Innovia Foundation —

SPOKANE, Wash. – On Sunday, September 4, 2022, the tragic loss of Sandy Williams, a distinguished civil rights activist, journalist and community leader, left a tremendous void in our community. Her visionary leadership and tenacious pursuit of equity and justice impacted countless lives. With reverence to her indelible legacy, Innovia, in partnership with Washington Trust Bank, Avista Foundation, Empire Health Foundation and the Cowles Company, is honored to announce that it has established and seeded a new $50,000 endowment, the Sandy Williams Fund for the Carl Maxey Center.

Sandy was the executive director of the Carl Maxey Center and founder of The Black Lens, a Spokane-based independent newspaper. She also served as the interim executive director of the Odvssev Youth Center. A cherished and respected partner of Innovia, Sandy generously offered her voice and insight as a member of Innovia's Spokane County Leadership Council and partner of LaunchNW.

"Our hearts are heavy as we mourn the loss of Sandy Williams, a courageous journalist, activist and beloved member of our community. Her voice was missed and long remembered," said Shelly O'Quinn, CEO of Innovia. "We look to her extraordinary legacy and unwavering vision for racial equity and justice to find our way forward."

Additionally, Sandy collaborated with Rob Curley at The Spokesman-Review, The Smith-Barbieri Progressive Fund, and the Michael Conley Charitable Fund at Innovia to fund and hire the Carl Maxey Race Relations and Racial Equity Reporter, who has worked in partnership with The Black Lens and The Spokesman-Review to raise awareness on the important issues around upholding racial equity and eliminating systemic racism in our community.

"We are devastated at the loss of Sandy Williams who so tirelessly served our community with wisdom and clarity of vision," said Ben Small, Executive Director of LaunchNW. "Her dedicated life of service leaves us with a profound sense of both loss and gratitude. She was an integral member of LaunchNW, serving on the marketing subcommittee and the Spokane planning committee and most recently, partnering with her board to host a Community Town Hall at the Carl Maxey Center."

Innovia invites the community to join us in honoring Sandy's impact and carrying on her vision. Learn more about this important new fund at Innovia, the Sandy Williams Fund for the Carl Maxey Center, at innovia.org/sandywilliamsfund.

I was dumped at a high kill shelter in Utah after my breeders couldn't sell me or my brother. He's also here with me looking for a new home!

Learn about groups overcoming the effects of pollution and climate change. Hear from the people affected by living on the largest toxic waste site in the nation. Read the warning signs: "The soils and sediments in this area contain harmful levels of lead, arsenic and other heavy metals. Young children and pregnant women are at the greatest risk from exposure."

Become part of the solution!

Take Interstate 90 to Exit 39, go toward Cataldo Old Mission State Park and follow The Dredge Road to the Old Mission Landing. Be sure to bring a lawn or camping chair.

Help Fight Wildlife Crime By Calling The CAP Hotline At (800) 632-5999

— Idaho Dept. of Fish & Game —

Cash rewards are available to callers who provide information leading to the citation of suspected wildlife violators.

With some hunting seasons underway and more opening soon, Idaho Fish and Game asks the public to call the Citizens Against Poaching (CAP) hotline if they witness a violation of wildlife laws.

"The public plays a critical role in detecting and addressing wildlife crimes," said Brian Jack, Idaho Fish and Game Assistant Chief of Enforcement. "Those who 'Make the Call' allow our officers to investigate and solve cases that would not otherwise be solved.'

Callers to the hotline, (800) 632-5999, can report wildlife law violations anonymously, 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Cash rewards are available to callers who provide information leading to the citation of suspected wildlife law violators.

People can also report violators online by filling out a poaching report.

Rewards are:

- $250 for birds, fish and general violations
- $400 for most big game animals and wild tur-
- $700 for trophy species such as bighorn sheep, mountain goat, grizzly, moose and caribou
- In special circumstances, these amounts can be higher.

Throughout its 40-year history, CAP has been holding violators accountable for stealing Idaho's fish and wildlife resources. Each year, CAP receives an average of 600 calls from the public, this results in an average of 150 citations issued and $20,000 paid in rewards. In 2021, CAP paid out $28,300 in rewards.

Those who report a wildlife violation are encouraged to note an accurate description of the people and vehicles involved, and report the incident as quickly as possible.

"The more detailed information witnesses can provide, and the quicker they report it, the more likely it is the violator will be caught," Jack said. "Accurate license plate numbers are extremely important, as well as the specific location, time and a description of the suspects."

Persons with any information about suspected poaching activity are encouraged to call the CAP hotline at (800) 632-5999, report online or contact their local Fish and Game office.

Traps, Snares And Pets Can Be A Bad Combination, Here's How To Avoid A Problem

— Idaho Dept. of Fish & Game —

Fish and Game provides resources that show pet owners how to spot and avoid trap sets, and how to release their pet if it becomes trapped

With many trapping seasons opening in October, upland game bird hunters and other folks recreating with off-leash pets are reminded to avoid traps and be prepared to act quickly in the event their hunting or hiking companion becomes trapped.

Most traps and snares are simple in design and easy to operate if you know what to do. Some of the larger foothold and body-gripping traps can be challenging because they require more effort to open, but the principles are the same.

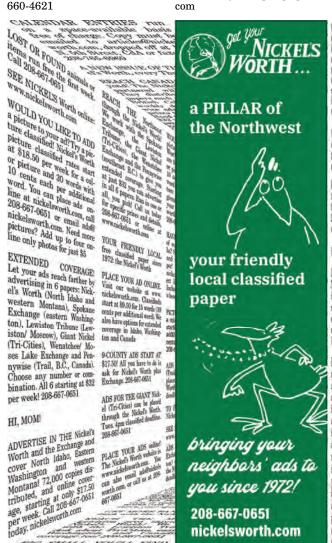

Fish and Game provides information on how to spot and avoid traps, and what to do if a pet gets caught. Both videos and brochure are available online.

While traps and snares are rarely encountered by bird hunters, many areas in Idaho have trapping seasons that overlap with upland game bird

To determine if and when trapping seasons are open in the area they are hunting, upland bird hunters can find wolf trapping season dates in the Idaho Big Game Seasons and Rules booklet, and other furbearer trapping season dates in the Idaho Upland Game, Turkey and Furbearer 2022-23 Seasons and Rules booklet.

Trappers are advised to avoid conflicts by closely following all rules and regulations, including not setting traps close to popular trails, trailheads or areas where people commonly frequent. Trappers are also encouraged to post warning signs near their trap lines to inform recreationists that traps or snares are in the area, which you can download and print from Fish and Game's website.

2022 Big Game Hunting Forecast Northwest Montana

— Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks —

Much of Northwest Montana experienced its third consecutive mild winter last year, benefiting whitetailed deer. Region 1 wildlife biologists generally observed good fawn recruitment this spring, ranging from 32 to 53 fawns per 100 adults during springs surveys. Overall whitetail numbers should be stable to increasing across the region, and hunters should see a fair number of bucks this fall due to three years of solid recruitment. Hunters holding a Libby CWD Management Zone Either-Sex White-Tailed Deer B License (199-20) are reminded that the license is only valid in the Libby CWD Management Zone, an area approximately 10 miles in radius around Libby, and only including parts of hunting districts (HDs) 100, 103 or 104. Maps of the Libby CWD Management Zone are available on the FWP website or at the Kalispell regional office.

Overall, mule deer numbers should be similar to last year with a continued influx of yearling bucks. Buck harvest in the region has been up from lows in 2017 in most hunting districts and biologist anticipate buck availability to be similar to last year. The percentage of four-point or greater bucks harvested was up in 2021, and it's anticipated to be similar results this fall. Hunters are reminded to check the regulations as only antlered bucks (i.e. a deer with an antler or antlers at least 4 inches long as measured from the top of the skull) may be harvested in Region 1. Hunters need to be aware of some regulation changes passed by the Fish and Wildlife Commission this winter. Several districts were combined, and HD 101 now has a three-week general antlered buck mule deer season followed by a limited hunt where only permit holders may harvest a mule deer buck. There is also an area in HD 103 that requires a permit to hunt mule deer (HD 103-50). FWP finalized a mule deer study that included study areas in the Whitefish Range and Fisher River areas in Region 1. That report is available on the FWP web site. Visit https://fwp.mt.gov/conservation/wildlifemanagement/deer for more information.

In areas where surveys were conducted in spring of 2022, elk calf recruitment was similar to last year: relatively low compared to other parts of Montana, but consistent with the five-year average for areas where surveys were conducted in northwest Montana. Surveys conducted in HD 121 resulted in 1,497 elk counted with a calf recruitment rate of 24 calves per 100 cows. Overall, elk numbers should be similar to last year. Elk hunting is challenging in northwest Montana due to difficult terrain, heavily forested areas and densities relatively lower than other areas in Montana. Elk distribution will likely change from now through the archery season and again during general rifle season due to changes in vegetation, snow levels and hunting pressure. Hunters are advised to look for areas in the backcountry away from roads and high hunting pressure.

FWP began collaring moose in HDs 105 and 106 (and in two other study areas) in 2013. So far, the moose study has revealed that the Cabinet-Salish moose population is relatively stable although perhaps at lower overall numbers than historic highs. Similar trends in moose populations are likely in most of Region 1. Visit https://fwp.mt.gov/conservation/wildlife-management/moose for more information.

Big game check stations will be open in Region 1 on weekends during the general season — Highway 2 west of Kalispell; Highway 83 north of Swan Lake; Highway 200 on the west end of Thompson Falls; and Highway 93 near Olney. The Canoe Gulch check station near Libby is no longer in operation and has been replaced by the Libby CWD sampling station located on the south end of Libby (mile marker 35 on Hwy 2). Hunters are required to stop at game check stations but stopping at the Libby CWD sampling station is voluntary.

In recent years, FWP has detected CWD in white-tailed deer, mule deer and moose in the Libby area. Hunters need to be aware of the Libby CWD Management Zone (MZ) and its boundaries, which includes portions of HDs 100, 103 and 104. In 2020, a single CWD-positive whitetail buck was detected outside the MZ near the Thompson Chain of Lakes, and another CWD-positive was discovered outside the MZ in 2021. Region 1 is not a priority surveillance area for CWD this year. Testing for CWD is voluntary and hunters wishing to have harvested deer, elk and moose tested can submit samples themselves, visit the Libby CWD Sampling Station (Montana Department of Transportation shop on U.S. Highway 2, mile marker 35) on weekends during the general season or stop by the Region 1 Headquarters in Kalispell (490 North Meridian) during business hours Monday thru Friday. FWP staff's ability to collect samples at game check stations will be limited and will occur only if it can be done safely and check stations are not busy. Hunters are encouraged to submit samples for testing, particularly in the Libby CWD MZ, so FWP can better assess the status of CWD in northwest Montana. Visit fwp.mt.gov/cwd for more information.

Only seven mountain goat tags are available within Region 1. Continued concerns about declining native goat herds necessitate this conservative allocation. Adult survival, particularly that of older-aged females, appears to drive population changes in mountain goats. Hunters are reminded that in Regions 1, 2 and 4 it is unlawful to take a female mountain goat accompanying a kid or a female in a group that contains one or more kids. Contact your local area biologist for details on mountain goat distribution and herd trajectories.

Overall, black bear numbers appear to be steady in northwest Montana. Due to a cool spring, huckleberry crops are patchy and late to ripen. If huckleberries are ripe and plentiful into September, bears may be widely dispersed. If huckleberry crops fail in large areas of northwestern Montana, black bears may move down into lower elevations and riparian areas where they are more accessible to hunters. Hunters should seek areas with a variety of other abundant food sources like serviceberries, chokecherries and mountain ash.

All successful bear hunters are required to report the harvest within 48 hours on the Harvest Reporting Line or through the MyFWP portal. Successful hunters in Region 1 are required to submit a premolar tooth, the sex of the harvested bear, bear management unit number and general location of the harvest within 10 days of harvest. This regulation applies only to Region 1. Hunters in other regions are required to submit the hide and skull to an FWP official within 10 days of harvest so FWP can collect a tooth for aging. The tooth will be sent to a laboratory where the age of the bear will be determined. FWP biologists use this age information, along with the sex of the bear, to manage bear populations in Montana. Currently hunting black bears with hounds is not legal in Region 1. If a bear hunter would like to know the age of the bear they harvested, they may look on MyFWP, or call their local area biologist. Results are available 9 to 12 months after the season's close. For more information, visit fwp.mt.gov.

Northwest Montana has abundant wolf numbers and recent population estimates indicate a relatively stable wolf population. The 2021 harvest was down from the record harvest in 2020, but populations appear healthy. Wolf-related legislation and Fish and Wildlife Commission season changes may affect several aspects of the 2022 hunting and trapping seasons, and hunters are encouraged to closely check regulations and the FWP website for updates. Despite good numbers, wolves can be difficult to find, don't always move as a pack and often move long distances. If hunters want to be successful, scouting and understanding wolf behavior is important. Visit https://fwp.mt.gov/conservation/wildlife-management/wolf for more information.

Northwest Montana has abundant mountain lion numbers. For the 2022 season, changes to the 2022 mountain lion regulations allow for purchase of a general lion license or an unlimited lion license until February 28, 2023. Hunters interested in pursuing mountain lions are encouraged to review the 2022 hunting regulations.

For any further questions, consult your local area biologist or the 2022 hunting regulations.

Youth Marksmanship Skills Workshops To Be Hosted In The Panhandle Region

— Idaho Dept. of Fish & Game –

Youth hunters: sight your gun in now before big game seasons start

Idaho Fish and Game staff and volunteers in the Panhandle Region will be hosting a Youth Marksmanship Skills Workshop on Sept. 25 at the Farragut Shooting Range Center in Athol.

The workshop is for youth, ages 9 to 17 who have successfully completed hunter education. Participants will receive one-on-one instruction and guidance on shooting safety and essentials, with particular focus on the mechanics of sighting in a scope. Even better, individual instruction will be provided by NRA certified instructors.

The workshop is participatory in nature, and some of the skills taught will include:

- · Basics of gun safety
- Basic shooting terminology and techniques
- · Mechanics of sighting in a rifle

Participants will need to bring the rifle they intend to use during the 2022 big game hunting seasons and at least one box of ammunition. Please note that reloads are not allowed. Participants will also need to bring their own eye and ear protec-

The workshop will run from 1pm to 4pm on Sept. 25 at the Farragut Shooting Range Center. Registration is required. The cost of the class is $10 per student.

Verification of hunter education certification will need to be demonstrated by showing a hunter education card or a 2022 hunting license.

Per state regulations, any participants under the age of 12 must have a parent, guardian or other designated adult present during live fire activities.

This workshop is one of the new "Hunting and Shooting Sport Skills" classes being offered across the state. Classes vary widely, but can include field dressing and skinning, handguns 101, shotgunning 101, CWD sampling and much more. Check for current and future class offerings.

If you're looking for in-person hunter, trapper or wolf trapper education classes, check out our Hunter Education Programs page. And remember, there is also an online, self-paced hunter education option.

For additional information, contact Volunteer Services Coordinator, Wendy Koons, at (208) 769-1414. Follow us on the Panhandle Region Facebook page for regular updates and news.

10 Tips For Hunters During Fire Season

– Idaho Dept. of Fish & Game –

Know before you go, be careful and do your part to prevent wildfires

With ideal conditions for wildfires to spread and with more hunters heading afield, hunters should pay close attention to fire closures and be prepared to alter their plans if necessary. They should also do their part to ensure they aren't contributing to the problem.

Here are 10 things every hunter can do during fire season:

1. Know before you go

Check your hunting area in advance of your hunt and see if there are fire closures or access restrictions due to fire danger. A great place to start is Idaho Fish and Game's Fire Page.

Currently, portions of south central and central Idaho, including the Salmon-Challis National Forest, is in Stage 1 Fire Restrictions. Know where the fire restrictions are and what they mean by using the Fire Restrictions Finder map.

2. Be patient

Most fires are typically extinguished or under control by October hunts. However, the Moose Fire which continues to burn near Salmon may potentially affect access this fall, as well as many other larger fires. If you know fires are burning in your hunting area, you may want to delay your hunts, or choose another area.

3. Be careful with all fires

Whether a campfire, gas lantern, cook stove, barbecue, etc., all can quickly start fires in tinder-dry forests and deserts. Each year, an increase in mancaused fires is usually observed during hunting season and is often accredited to warming fires not being properly extinguished. Firefighting resources are limited, and you don't want to add to the problem. Know the current fire restrictions for the area you're hunting and abide by them. Even after rain or snow, forests can remain dry and flammable.

4. Be careful with vehicles and other motorized equipment

Parking vehicles on dry grass can ignite fires. Chainsaws, generators and other machines with gas engines can start fires. Use them wisely and within the rules of fire restrictions.

5. Be on the lookout for fires

If you spot a wildfire, report it immediately by calling 911. Hunters may want to carry a shovel and water jug in their vehicle and put out any campfires they see left unattended

6. Stay away from fire-fighting activities and abide by closures

Sometimes area closures seem to extend far beyond the actual fire, and hunters may be tempted to sneak into their favorite spot. It is illegal to enter a closed area. Wildfires can also move fast, and rescues require taking resources away from firefighting. Please remember that fires are often associated with Temporary Flight Restrictions that prohibit aircraft travel – including the use of drones/UAVs.

7. Avoid burned areas

They can be hazardous in many ways, including falling trees, holes, loose rocks, etc. They also aren't much fun to hunt. Give them a rest and let the land recover.

8. Beware of rainstorms

They will help put out any remaining fires, but rain can also cause flash flooding and landslides on newly burned areas.

9. Expect some closures even when the fires are out

Land managers are cautious with newly burned areas and may keep restrictions in place well into winter and possibly longer.

10. Understand fires aren't all bad

Fires can have tragic consequences, as we have seen with lost lives, burned homes and disrupted lives and livelihoods. But fires can also improve wildlife habitat, and in most wildlands, are part of the natural cycle.

Ask First To Hunt On Private Land. Don't Wait!

- Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks -

Don't wait until it is too late. Hunters who haven't already asked permission from private landowners to hunt need to do so as soon as possible.

Montana law requires hunters to obtain permission for all hunting on private land. Whether pursuing upland game birds, coyotes, gophers or any other wildlife, hunters must have permission from the landowner before hunting on private property. This also includes entering private land to retrieve wildlife or to access public land to hunt

Landowners may grant permission in person, over the phone, in writing or by posting signs that explain what type of hunting is allowed and under what conditions hunting may occur on land owned or controlled by the landowner.

Access: Ask early, don't wait

Montana's millions of acres of private land offer some excellent hunting opportunities-the only catch is gaining the landowner's permission to hunt.

It is Montana law that hunters obtain landowner permission to hunt on all private land.

Here are a few things to keep in mind that will greatly improve results when attempting to secure hunting access to private land.

· Show courtesy to the landowner and make hunting arrangements by calling or visiting at times convenient to the landowner.

- Plan ahead and secure permission well in advance of the actual hunting date.
- · Provide complete information about yourself and your hunting companions, including vehicle descriptions and license plate numbers.
- Explain what type of hunting you wish to do and be sure to ask any questions which can help clarify the conditions of access.
- Follow the landowner's instructions and bring with you only the companions for whom you obtained landowner permission.
- Be sure to thank the landowner after your hunt.

Hunters and landowners can learn more by investing some time on Montana's Hunter-Landowner Stewardship Project, an information program for anyone interested in promoting responsible hunter behavior and good hunter and landowner relationships in Montana. Visit FWP's website at fwp.mt.gov, then click "Hunting" under Quick Links.

For more information on hunting access in Montana, check out the "Hunter Access" pages on FWP's website at fwp.mt.gov.

Big Game Hunters Should See Good Hunting in 2022 With A Few Exceptions

– Idaho Dept. of Fish & Game

Elk Hunting

Elk populations tend to swing less drastically and sporadically than deer, and have stayed relatively consistent in recent years. And last year marked the eighth year in a row where elk harvest eclipsed 20,000, which has happened only one other time dating back to the 1930s.

Although slightly fewer hunters took home slightly fewer elk, 2021 still showed to be in line with the 10-year average (20,804). Antlered elk dropped only slightly, from 11,897 in 2020 to 11,142 last year. Antlerless elk saw a slightly bigger drop (roughly 14.9 percent) in harvest numbers, from 2020 to 2021. Earlier that year, Fish and Game officials introduced new seasons aimed at reducing the number of elk in certain areas where they are well above objective or are infringing on private property.

Fish and Game Deer/ Elk Coordinator Toby Boudreau believes we will see much of the same, if not better conditions for elk this fall.

"Elk populations are stable-to-increasing. With better science and more camera estimates, I think we are trending to more elk than we've ever seen in Idaho," he said.

Overall, hunters can expect to see another impressive year, similar to 2021. A wet spring will also be good for antler growth, and there's likely more younger bulls out in the field this year.

Speaking of young bulls, next to hunter harvest reports, trapping and collaring elk calves is the most reliable tool Fish and Game biologists use to estimate survival. Elk have not been trapped and collared for as long as mule deer, and elk calves typically survive at a higher rate than mule deer fawns.

Last winter's 78 percent survival is at the upper end of that range and indicates a growing elk herd. (By comparison, survival rates ranged from a low of about 52 percent to a high of 84 percent in 2014-15.)

Many are wondering if this year's high winter calf survival is going to potentially pave the way for another 20,000-plus harvest year, which would be only the second time in history that elk harvest over 20,000 has spanned nine consecutive years.

"Elk numbers are sustainable right now," said Boudreau, and added that many elk populations have shifted over the last four decades.

"We're seeing elk in different places than they've historically been, and their numbers are still on the rise," he said.

The general redistribution of elk throughout the state is not a bad thing and can be linked to a handful of factors.

"Wildfire," Boudreau says, "is a wildcard that can have a heavy impact both on mule deer habitat and elk habitat."

A large wildfire can wipe out large portions of bitterbrush and sagebrush and initially regrow as grass that provides a better diet for elk. While this is bad news for mule deer, elk often thrive in these situations.

"Because of this shift in forage, we're seeing elk relocating to these drier, post-wildfire regions that mule deer don't find as suitable," Boudreau said.

Elk are also finding agriculture lands too tempting pass up, and harvests in recent years also includes a higher number of depredation hunts where elk are damaging crops.

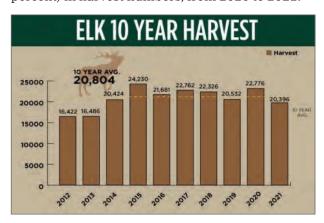

But overall, there remains plenty of elk for hunters to pursue in most regions of the state, including lots of general hunting opportunities. Elk hunters need to be diligent at finding areas where elk want to be, and not dwell in areas where the hunters want them to be, but the elk aren't there.

By The Numbers | 2021 Harvest

- Total elk harvest in 2021: 20,396
- 2020 harvest total: 22,776
- Overall hunter success rate: 22.9 percent
- Antlered: 11,142
- Antlerless: 9,253
- Taken during general hunts: 12,778 (17.6 percent success rate)
- Taken during controlled hunts: 7,619 (41.5 percent success rate)

Detailed Deer And Elk Outlook For The Region

— Idaho Dept. of Fish & Game —

Panhandle

Elk

Hunters should expect good elk hunting this fall. Elk tend to be more resilient to tough environmental conditions than deer. Numbers remain strong in the Panhandle with Units 1, 4, 5 and 6 being among the 10 top elk units in the state by harvest. Calf survival has remained good (above 80%) the past two winters and hunters should see plenty of spike elk and other elk available for harvest.

Deer

Some portions of the region experienced elevated white-tailed deer fawn mortality during winter and as a result, hunters might notice fewer yearlings in the woods in certain areas. This is likely due to the extreme drought conditions the region experienced last spring and summer, coupled with heavy snow that started relatively early and persisted throughout the winter into early spring.

With that said, Unit 1 continues to be the top whitetailed deer unit in the state. Units 2, 5 and 6 continue to earn top spots to harvest white-tailed deer, as well. Hunters should still be able to find plenty of deer and should see a good mix of age classes.

What hunters should be aware of this fall

While there haven't been a lot of large fires in the Panhandle by late summer, things are drying out and hunters should keep an eye on conditions in the areas they like to hunt.

As always, hunters are encouraged to remain vigilant in their bear awareness and identification skills. In the Panhandle, grizzly bears are most commonly found in Unit 1, but have been infrequently found in Units 2, 3, 4, 4A, 6, 7, & 9. Black bears are common throughout most of the region.

As a reminder, hunters should become familiar with Fish and Game's Large Tracts Program with timber companies, which have motorized restrictions in place set by the landowner. It is the hunter's responsibility to know and abide by these restrictions.

It is important to remember that these properties under the Large Tracts Program are private lands, and to help keep them open to public access, users should respect the land and any restrictions that are in place. For more information, visit the Large Tracts Program webpage.

Clearwater Region

Elk

Elk densities continue to remain relatively low in the Lolo, Selway and Hells Canyon zones, although some positive signs in the number of calves seen have been observed in recent years.

Populations appear to be relatively stable in the Palouse zone, and harvest numbers have remained consistent in recent years.

Aerial surveys to determine herd sizes were conducted during the spring of 2022 in the Dworshak monitoring.

Elk City surveys showed an increase in elk herds and should provide good opportunity for hunters. Hunters should be aware that Treponeme-associated hoof disease (TAHD) has been detected in multiple units in the Clearwater region. While elk infected with TAHD are safe to consume, biologists ask sportsmen to report elk that appear to have trouble walking or have abnormal hooves.

Mule Deer

The most robust mule deer populations in the region are located along the Snake and Salmon River breaks (Units 11, 13, 14 and 18), and these units are limited to controlled hunts. Some mule deer do occupy other units across the region, but primarily at relatively low densities.

However, hunters willing to put forth the effort to get into some of the regions' backcountry areas (Units 16A, 17, 19 and 20) can find good numbers of mule deer during general seasons in isolated pock-

White-tailed Deer

Although the region has healthy white-tailed deer populations, an outbreak of epizootic hemorrhagic disease (EHD) in 2021 significantly reduced some local populations. This outbreak was widespread throughout north Idaho and severely impacted Units 8, 8A, 10A and 11A.

Abundant hunting opportunity with high success rates and a high percentage of bucks harvested larger than 4 and 5-points is still expected in much of the region, particularly at the agriculture/timber interface, or units with substantial timber harvest and a variety of habitats.

But hunters can expect to see fewer deer overall and should be aware of certain season changes, such as the removal of extra antlerless white-tailed deer tags in units 8, 8A, 10A and 11A to allow populations to rebound in response to the EHD die off last year.

What hunters should be aware of this fall

Following an extremely hot and dry year in 2021 that contributed to large wildfires in the Craig Mountain area, the Clearwater region experienced a relatively mild winter and a spring with ample rain that allowed for abundant vegetation growth in 2022. These conditions provided above-average summer habitat and forage conditions for big game herds. Winter big game mortality was average and did not cause detectable population declines.

This summer, there were no large land closures due to wildfires, however, sportsmen should be aware of the possibility that these may occur throughout the fall hunting season. Hunters should check for closures before heading into the field. Sportsmen are asked to please observe all restrictions in place regarding fires and off-road travel.

Sportsmen should be aware that PotlatchDeltic regulations changed and limit motorized travel in certain areas on their lands. These restrictions were put in place to decrease risk of wildfire, limit resource. environmental and infrastructure damage, and to reduce road and trail maintenance needs and cost.

People planning to access areas in units 5, 6, 7, 8, 8A, 9, 10 and 10A that fall within PotlatchDeltic lands are encouraged to contact the Clearwater or Panhandle regional offices for more information on travel restrictions.

Hunters should beware of regulations this year regarding mandatory CWD testing and restricting

Big Game Hunters Should See Good Hunting in 2022 With A Few Exceptions - Idaho Dept. of Fish & Game –

White-Tailed Deer Hunting

White-tailed deer populations are typically a little more stable than mule deer populations, but they are still affected by weather and disease, as we saw in 2021 when a significant outbreak of epizootic hemorrhagic disease killed an estimated 6,000 to 10,000 whitetails, mostly in portions of the Clearwater Region.

Continuing into 2022, whitetails will be on a slow, yet uphill trend as their herds rebuild, which will hopefully occur fairly quickly. Whitetail populations have recovered from previous EHD die offs in about 3 years, and not all places where the disease hit will see a full recovery that soon.

Despite the outbreak, and estimated 54,223 hunters harvested a total of 21,418 white-tailed deer in 2021— a 13.8 percent drop from 2020. It's not all doom and gloom though. Like elk and mule deer, white-tailed deer have still shown impressive numbers above the 20,000 mark (as shown in the chart above), still averaging 25,182 harvested in the past 10 years. And a lot of those bucks aren't small, either, because mature bucks still take up a considerable share of the harvest.

Overall, this year's whitetail hunting can probably be summed as good, but with an asterisk. If you've traditionally hunted an area that was hit by EHD, you probably should hunt elsewhere.

"We found a large percentage of whitetails that died from EHD were found at lower elevations which is predominately private land," Boudreau said.

But Idaho's white-tailed deer population outside the Clearwater region is looking healthy assuming EHD does not resurface again this summer, and whitetail hunters typically enjoy high success rates due to (relatively) healthy whitetail populations, generous season lengths and lots of either-sex hunting opportunities.

Last year's EHD outbreak took its toll on whitetails, affecting roughly 5 percent of the state's white-tailed deer population, but the drop could be short lived and unnoticeable to most hunters.

"Whitetails are incredibly prolific, and don't always die when infected with EHD,"Boudreau said "Assuming we have more mild winters and limited outbreaks of EHD, we should expect white-tailed deer to rebound by about 2025."

Boudreau says that hunters can still expect to find strong numbers of whitetails in and around the Clearwater region, but should avoid lower-elevation areas. Alternatively, lower elevations in the Salmon River and Snake River corridors are proving to have ever-increasing amounts of whitetail presence, and should be considered good destinations for whitetailed deer hunters this fall.

By The Numbers | 2021 Harvest

- Total white-tailed deer in 2021: 21,418
- · 2020 harvest total: 24,849
- Overall hunter success rate: 39.5 percent
- Antlered: 14,053
- Antlerless: 7,365
- Taken during general hunts: 19,449 (38.9 percent success rate)
- Taken during controlled hunts: 1,969 (45.8 percent success rate)

Large wildfires can affect hunts and access, even after the fires are out

Hunters planning their first trips want to pay close attention to fire closures and be prepared to alter their plans if necessary.

Large fires are common in Idaho and are often burning when archery season opens at the end of August. Fires can created large closure areas that temporarily curb hunters' access to some areas. To see current area closures and fire boundaries go to Fish and Game's Idaho Fire Map.

Fire conditions change as cooler, wetter arrives in late summer and fall, but it's important that hunters know fire closures can extend far beyond the boundaries of fires that are active, or recently extinguished. Land closures can continue into October, even if weather cools and we get rain or snow, however, officials typically try to reopen areas when they are safe.

Idaho Fish and Game will try to keep hunters informed of the latest fire news on its fire information

Hunters should also be aware of safety restrictions on campfires, gas engines, and other potential fire sources in many areas of the state. Check with the Forest Service, BLM, or other land manager to find out if fire restrictions exist in your hunting area.

These restrictions typically limit campfires and other open flames to designated areas, such as campgrounds.

Hunters have options if their hunt area is affected by

Fires can affect some hunts, particularly controlled hunts, but it's rare that access to a hunting area is completely blocked for the duration of the hunt, and fires usually are not large enough to close an entire hunting unit.

Hunters affected by a fire closure can typically adjust their schedules to hunt later in the season, or find open areas within the hunting unit.

However, hunters with controlled hunt tags may exchange them for general season tags before the controlled hunt begins, but controlled hunt fees will not be refunded.

Hunters may also exchange general tags, such as elk tags, to hunt in a different zone if tags are still available, but tags must be exchanged before the season begins, and there is a fee to exchange tags.

Fish and Game may consider requests for rain checks for controlled hunts if access to a hunting unit is completely blocked because of a wildfire. Rain checks would be valid the following year, if approved, and offered only for the same species and hunt area as the current tag.

2022 Big Game Hunting Forecast

- Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks -

HELENA – Are you ready for hunting season? FWP can help. In addition to the following hunting forecast, FWP provides online information about hunting access, including our popular Block Management Program. Through the program, we coordinate with landowners to provide hunting access to more than 7 million acres of private land.

The interactive Hunt Planner map allows users to look at information for various species, including hunting districts and regulations. The hunt planner interactive map is a great way to access our block management information, so if you're planning a hunt in a certain area, you can see if there are Block Management Areas available to expand your opportunity.

As a reminder, many hunting districts have changed. Don't assume the HD you have hunted for the last several years is the same as it used to be. Double check the regulations to be sure.

And, as always, you can contact our helpful staff at any of our regional offices around the state. They're happy to help and can often get you pointed in the right direction with just a few simple tips.

2022 Big Game Hunting Forecast Western Montana

— Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks —

White-tailed deer numbers have been on an upward trend in recent years after several hard winters suppressed recruitment between 2017-2019. Fawn production looks good again this summer after our third consecutive mild winter.

Opportunities to hunt mule deer are somewhat limited in western Montana. Many districts require a permit or B license, awarded through the statewide application process earlier this year. For 2022, unlimited permits have been removed and, in some of those districts, have been replaced with a shortened three-week season for bucks. Mule deer hunters should plan to go high in the mountains for the best opportunity at bigger bucks. Pay close attention to the regulations to make sure you are aware of season length and are properly licensed to hunt mule deer.

Three consecutive mild winters have contributed to normal overwinter elk calf survival, which should pay dividends for hunters on public lands this year and in the coming years.

Hunters are encouraged to read the regulations closely as there are multiple changes this year including some hunting district boundary changes in HDs 201/202/240/285 and elimination of HDs 203 and 283. Holders of limited bull permits are now restricted to hunting the district they hold their permit, with the exception of HD 270. Antlerless permits have been removed and replaced in some places with B licenses. There are still some early and late shoulder season opportunities but note that late season rifle opportunities end Jan. 8 this season.

There are only a few pronghorn hunting opportunities in western Montana. Hunting is limited to a few hunters who received a license through a special drawing.

For more information on deer, elk and pronghorn numbers and hunting opportunities in western Montana, check out past editions of the FWP Region 2 Wildlife Quarterly, available online at fwp.mt.gov/r2wildlife-quarterlies.
